Anking Falls In Easy Battle; Japan Opens Hankow Push

Capital Half-Hour By Air From City

Lunghai Drive Slowed by Yellow River Flood as Dikes Are Cut.

Shanghai, June 13.—Chinese forces defending Anking, the capital of Anhwei Province, 215 miles down the Yangtze River from the national provisional capital of Hankow, relinquished the strategic city last night without a struggle. The Japanese naval command, this correspondent was informed reliably, had expected that it would require ten days of siege to take well fortified Anking.

VICTOR KEEN.

[A United Press dispatch of Tuesday said the Japanese were proceeding beyond Anking with their drive on Hankow and their first objective was a short railway west of Anking, leading southward from Kiukiang, on the Yangtze, to Nanchang, where one of China's largest air fields is located. The Japanese regard this railway as the key to the southern defenses of Hankow.

[The United States gunboat Monocacy and one British gunboat were at Kiukiang, just outside the danger zone designated by the Japanese.—Editor's note.]

Troops Land in Fog.

The Japanese naval vessels attacking the Anhwei capital landed troops at 1 a. m. Sunday under cover of fog and met an ineffective random fire from trench mortars and light artillery, all beyond range of their far-away ship targets. After a brief naval barrage, the Japanese landing party captured a fort outside the Anking defenses.

The landing force then moved toward Anking with little opposition, while another Japanese column landed farther upriver and attacked the city from the north. The eastward and northward attacking columns occupied the city at 9 p. m. yesterday. The navy occupied all wharves at 7 a. m. today and announced the whole capital, including all its river defenses, was taken.

Anking is only 30 minutes by plane from Hankow and has an air-

Opera Star Halts Real Stage Blaze, Misses No Notes

London, June 13 (AP).—Beniamino Gigli, Italian tenor, turned fireman tonight in an unrehearsed stage fire of a first night performance of "La Boheme"—and never missed a note.

A brilliant Covent Garden audience which included two cousins of King George, Princess Helena Victoria and Princess Marie Louise, looked on in astonishment when the singer unintentionally lighted an imitation stove in the Paris garret scene.

Smoke rapidly filled the stage. Behind the scenes, firemen had hoses primed as Gigli—still singing—stepped into the wings and got a bucket of water. It took a second bucketful to quench the flames, and then the performance went on as if nothing had happened.

District Autoists Paid $2,724,000 in 1937 Gasoline Tax

Gasoline taxes paid to the District in 1937 by District motorists reached $2,724,000, an all-time high, according to the District of Columbia Petroleum Association.

Records from the United States Bureau of Public Roads indicated the District's gasoline tax cost its motorists 14.4 per cent more last year than 1936, when $2,382,000 was collected, and that the tax bill of motorists in 1937 was 32 per cent higher than in 1934, when $2,063,000 was collected.

The Post Observes Birthday And Adds 15 New Features

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, slices into The Post's five-tiered birthday cake—one for each of the five years under the present management—as Felix Morley, the editor, looks on.

Radio Audience Taken Behind the Scenes to Follow Making of Paper That Now Has Sullivan, Lippman, Dorothy Thompson.

The Washington Post last night rounded out its fifth year under the ownership and management of Eugene Meyer.

In celebration of the event, a radio audience, tuned in to WRC, was taken behind the scenes to follow the making of a newspaper. It heard the voices of men and women—including correspondents in London and Paris—who write for and edit The Post; it heard the clatter of the linotype machines, and, finally, the roar of the presses as another issue of The Post went out to Washington and the world.

The listeners-in heard Mr. Meyer thank the people of Washington for their support and encouragement, and they heard him pledge himself to "continue to labor to give Washington an ever-improving newspaper."

Adds 15 New Features.

Translating that "ever-improving" promise into the concrete, Alexander F. Jones, the managing editor, announced that The Post was adding 15 new features and services. They are:

Walter Lippman, famous commentator on the affairs of the Nation and the world. His column never before has appeared in a Washington newspaper.

Mark Sullivan, author of "Our Times" and one of America's foremost political commentators.

Lucius Beebe on List.

Katherine Vincent, style and fashion expert.

Franco Takes 'Capital' Port, Bottles Up Foe

Civilians Cheer Entry Into Castellon De La Plana; Many Captured.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, June 13.—The thriving provincial capital of Castellon de la Plana on the Mediterranean and a large number of its loyalist defenders fell to Generalissimo Franco's insurgent army tonight, it was announced officially at Franco's Burgos headquarters.

The city of 38,000 population and citadel of sieges since the Carlist wars was "completely occupied" at 7:15 p. m., it was announced, when Navarrese and Galician troops sloshed through the streets in driving rain. The victory was hailed at Burgos as "causing the enemy a great defeat."

The capture of the city and its adjoining port of El Grao against resistance that vanished after swift encirclement by Franco's forces on all sides opened the way for a "win the war" assault on Valencia to isolate Madrid.

Owing to the speed of the insurgent encirclement, nationalists said, most of the civilian population remained in the shell-battered city and greeted the conquering insurgent troops "with an enthusiastic welcome."

"On the Castellon front at 7:15 p. m. the nationalists occupied the capital city of Castellon de la Plana and the port of El Grao after causing the enemy a great defeat and, continuing their operations, cut off enemy communications with Villareal," the official announcement said.

The loyalist defenders were trapped within the city when an

Lucius Beebe Surveys Capital, Finds Sen. Lewis Best Dressed

Lucius Beebe, Broadway's most lifted eyebrow, rushed into town yesterday leaving a trail of clipped sentences behind him.

LUCIUS BEEBE.

It was terribly difficult to interview Beebe; the sartorial elegance of him was distracting from his words. "But bother the likes of me—had I anticipated all the attention I'd have dressed up for the occasion," said the columnist, connoisseur of food and drink, authority on men's fashions and Broadway referee.

"Get this much straight at the start: Lucius Beebe isn't going to stick his neck out in Washington; I might want to come back here, and I'm no smart aleck." His neck, a perfect 15½, receded at the thought into the green shirt that harmonized with a paler and sartorially symphonic tie. "No, I won't say they don't dress well here . . . of course, no one has asked me to say it; I just won't say it . . . I'll comment, rather that Senator Jim Ham Lewis is the best-dressed man in town . . . I met him at Evalyn McLean's New Year party . . . And about Washington dignity . . .

"The last time here I was guest of honor at a party given by Eddie Melcher; it was all front: frock coats and high-toned talk about the Little Theater movement and its influence on the American drama—up to a point . . . After that, everyone removed to the convenient precincts of the German Embassy and spent the night sliding down the grand stairway on tin service

$33,000,000 D.C. Bills Go To President

Senate Group Reports Deficiency Items and Shrine Provision.

Clearing its calendar of pending District legislation, the House yesterday approved and sent to the White House bills providing approximately $33,000,000 for slum removal and public improvements here. It refused to sanction a long-sought measure to force the 5,000 taxicabs of the National Capital to carry liability insurance.

There were these additional developments:

The Senate Appropriations Committee reported the third deficiency bill carrying District items approved by the House totaling $832,847, to which was added $81,359 for local improvements and existing services.

It recommended Senate acquiescence in the House provision of $500,000 to begin construction of the Jefferson Memorial in Potomac Park, but struck out $6,000,000 to start work on buildings for the War Department and the Social Security Board.

Senate-approved measures accepted by the House will release $15,000,000 for use of the Alley Dwelling Authority in its slum-clearance program and authorization also was given the District to borrow $18,150,000 of PWA funds for a construction program under the 45 per cent grant terms now enjoyed by the States.

The House also completed legislative action on three additional bills and passed three still awaiting Senate approval.

Measures sent to the President provide for modernization of the original District zoning law, passed in 1920; for simplification of the procedure of levying and collecting taxes and making assessments, including authority for the Commissioners to remove inequalities in the existing tax-collecting and assessing systems and for the issuance of a license to practice to Dr. Sigfried Speyer by the Healing Arts Commission.

Still requiring Senate action are proposals to amend the charter of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, to amend the District banking code to enable trust companies to follow the procedure for reducing their capitalization now used by national banks, and to raise the height limit on property at the southeast corner of Massachusetts avenue and Thirteenth street northwest from 90 to 100 feet.

All the bills were passed without debate except the one to raise the building height limitation, which

Cab Driver Quits Relief Rolls, Asks To Repay $70.70

New York, June 13.—Almerindo Portfolio, the city treasurer, received today from Eugene W. Casey, 32-year-old colored taxicab driver, a letter scrawled on cheap note paper and duly notarized requesting that Casey and his family be stricken from the relief rolls and notified how to begin paying back the $70.70 the Caseys have received in three months on relief.

The letter follows:

"Dear sir: Just to let you know me and my wife have no further need for the relief as I am putting my cab on the streets and would like to be cut off on our own will. Please sir tell me how I can repay back. Thank you ever so much sincerely.

Boy Killed in Vain Effort to Save Pup

The two were romping in a Garden City park near the electric-powered Long Island Railroad. Suddenly, Puddles barked and bounded up on the tracks.

Billy screamed: "Puddles! come back! third rail!"

But the dog touched it and died. Billy, still screaming, ran to him, right in the path of a train. Their bodies landed together, 50 feet away.

Martin Ousts 5 Officers in UAW Purge

Six More of 24 Directors Walk Out of Angry Board Meeting.

C.I.O. Union Split Over Factionalism; Lewis Sees Victims.

The international executive board of the United Automobile Workers union last night was split into two angry camps, with five of the 24 members suspended by President Homer Martin and six others having walked out of a board meeting upon announcement of the suspension.

Martin said the following had been removed from office in the C. I. O.-affiliated union:

Richard T. Frankensteen, Wyndham Mortimer, Ed Hall and Walter N. Wells, vice presidents, and George Addes, secretary treasurer.

At the same time the union president warned six others who walked out of the meeting that they were subjecting themselves, also, to possible suspension. They were:

Ellsworth Cramer, Tracy M. Doll, Paul Miley, Richard Reisinger, Leo Lamotte and Walter Reuther.

The five suspended will be tried, it was announced, on charges of violating a program of the union designed to eliminate factionalism. No date has been set for the trial.

Lewis Called Session.

The action followed lengthy conferences here Sunday, which had been summoned in the office of C. I. O. Chieftain John L. Lewis. Hours of earnest discussion of the long-burning factional bitterness failed to effect an accord.

Thus, some of the most active of the union's leaders, often prominent in news of the young organization's rapid growth in size and power, find themselves removed from office by the union president whose continuance in office frequently had been reported in peril.

Frankensteen said later, prior to departing for Detroit, that he would fight the suspension and demand "a full trial." He said he would carry the fight to a convention of the union if the executive board upheld the ousting.

Ousted Five See Lewis.

Only yesterday Frankensteen was one of the companions of John L. Lewis, C. I. O. head, on a visit to Capitol Hill in the interest of the amendments to the Walsh-Healey act.

Following the suspension, the removed officers conferred with Lewis but no word came from the talk.

To each of the suspended officers, Martin sent a letter accusing the five of breaking faith and of demonstrating "irresponsibility" in the conduct of union affairs.

He said the five had brought "reproach" upon the union by giving leadership to a minority of the board and pointed out that less

B. T. Galloway, 75, Ex-U.S. Aide, Discovered Dead

Beverley T. Galloway, 75, retired plant pathologist in the Department of Agriculture and an Assistant Secretary of Agriculture in the Wilson administration, was found dead last night near the corner of Daniels road and Wise road northwest.

He had been reported missing Saturday by members of his family with whom he lived at 7106 Piney Branch road northwest.

Mr. Galloway's wife died two years ago. He was retired in 1933.

Surviving are three sons, Beverley S. Galloway, of Olean, N. Y.; A. Gordon Galloway, of the Department of Agriculture, and Robert Rankin Galloway, of the Interior Department.

The incident arose because of alleged Peruvian violations of the tentatively fixed frontier nearly two weeks ago.

Lewis Wants the Walsh-Healy Act Passed This Session.

Measure Would Penalize Violators of Wagner Labor Law.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, delivered an ultimatum in person yesterday to Speaker Bankhead of the House—pass the Walsh-Healey bill this session or the New Deal will answer at the polls. Lewis voiced the C. I. O.'s insistence on the bill, which would penalize all firms doing business with the Government if they violated the national labor relations act or failed to comply with specified wage-hour standards, in the Speaker's office.

Kennedy at Parley.

Present in the Speaker's room were Lewis and Bankhead, Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas; House Rules Committee Chairman John O'Connor, of New York, and Representative Pat Boland, of Pennsylvania, Democratic whip of the House. Also there were Lewis' immediate aides, Lee Pressman, general counsel for the C. I. O.; Gardner Jackson, of Labor's Nonpartisan League; Richard Frankensteen, of the United Automobile Workers, and, most significantly, Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy, of Pennsylvania, stronghold of C. I. O. strength.

Kennedy's presence, it was said, was to back up the C. I. O. threat to such loyal New Dealers as Boland in Pennsylvania. Lewis told those present that the provisions in the bill, which materially amends the old Walsh-Healey Government contract act, must be legislated into law at this session.

Snell Condemns Visit.

The House Republican leader, Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, slashed at the Lewis visit yesterday as "a spectacle that will undoubtedly shock a great many people." He added:

"But what else can be expected from the man who owns the National Labor Relations Board and whose interest in the White House is disputed only as to its extent?

"Mr. Lewis in 1936 put $500,000 of his followers' wages into the Democratic war chest. That Mr. Lewis expected substantial political advantage should have been evident to all. Certainly he left no doubt about it . . .

"Next we shall see the Speaker's office moved down to the C. I. O. headquarters, with the Democratic Congressmen being summoned there to learn Mr. Lewis' wishes. Mr. Lewis obviously believes that those who pay the fiddler are entitled to call the tune."

One provision in the bill blacklists for three years all firms which have violated or are now violating the labor relations act. Lewis and the C. I. O. are particularly keen, it was said, to have this section enforced rigorously, as it would strike crushing blows at the millions of dollars worth of Government busi-

Rail Aid Parley Today to Speed Adjournment

Labor Chiefs Will Confer; Garner Picks Wednesday for Quitting.

By Sidney Olson.

With the fate of rail-aid legislation to be settled by a meeting of railway labor chiefs this morning, Congressional leaders yesterday grooved Congress for a midweek adjournment.

Vice President Garner told reporters to bet on Wednesday night. The Senate majority leader, Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, also picked Wednesday.

But Speaker Bankhead and House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, settled on Thursday night as more likely. All agreed that the fast legislative pace set in the last few days would see cleared calendars in both chambers very soon.

Committee to Meet.

The complicated railroad situation remained in a state of flux. Despite a Presidential declaration to Barkley, Rayburn and Bankhead yesterday that no rail legislation was sought for the session by the Administration, it was learned that the Senate Banking Committee at a session this morning will reconsider the rail-aid bill which would empower the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make unlimited equipment loans to railroads without certification by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

It was understood that the committee, which is headed by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, may report out the bill once more "if the news from downtown is Tydings Drafts Compromise for Investigation of Politics.

King Charges Plan To Balk Full Study

Conferees Complete the Work on Lending-Spending Measure.

By Robert C. Albright.

Two eleventh-hour efforts to force a Senate investigation of "politics in relief" were launched yesterday as proponents of the inquiry charged the Administration leadership with attempting to "smother" it.

A belated drive to place the Senate squarely on record against political expenditure of relief funds opened as Congressional conferees finished work on a $3,753,000,000 relief-recovery measure. House conferees took a $212,000,000 Senate appropriation for farm parity price subsidies back to their chamber for a special vote. They agreed to a $300,000,000 lending increase for the Housing Administration.

Tydings Seeks Compromise.

Attacks on Senate refusal to bar politics in relief came in a radio speech by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, and in independent moves for a relief ivestigation by Senator Tydings, of Maryland, and Senator King, of Utah (both Democrats).

Failing to win Senate Audit Committee approval of a resolution creating a special investigation group, Senator Tydings started drafting a compromise proposal broadening the investigating powers of the Senate Committee on Campaign Expenditures.

Senator King served notice on the Senate he will move to discharge the Audit Committee from control of his own resolution calling for an independent three-man Senate inquiry, unless there is immediate action.

"They want to smother it," King said. "What they are trying to do is prevent a comprehensive investigation."

Wheeler Scores Hopkins.

Chairman Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, of the Senate Audit Committee, called a meeting of his group to consider the Tyding compromise this morning. The Marylander was said to have drafted his latest proposal on advice of Byrnes, but the latter declined comment.

In a radio speech, Senator Wheeler lashed out at Works Progress Administrator Hopkins' interference in the Iowa primaries and declared: "Political necessity cannot justify politics in relief, and political advantage thus gained will not be enduring."

Senate Majority Leader Barkley continued to insist that the existing Campaign Expenditures Committee has authority to investigate "politics in relief," while Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, of the campaign committee, denied it has this power.

May Retire.

Senator Sheppard said he is considering retiring from the committee if the Senate insists on his group conducting the relief inquiry, or broadens its authority to investigate.

"I have lots of work to do, and I don't see how I can find the time," said Sheppard. "I am considering asking Vice President Garner to appoint somebody else."

Sheppard said he had read through the resolution creating his own committee several times, and he cannot agree with Senator Barkley that his group now has power to investigate politics in relief.

"Senator Sheppard does have the authority," Barkley told reporters. "Every other member of his committee believes that he has. If he doesn't, his authority can be

Wife's 'Rival' at Landis Trial; Jury May Hear Her Tomorrow

By Howard F. Wentworth.

James L. Landis, rookie fireman, made plans to marry an attractive Washington nurse shortly before his young wife was found on a lonely northeast road, a jury in District Court was told yesterday.

On trial for his life in connection with the brutal slaying of 22-year-old Blanche Gertrude Landis, his high school sweetheart, the dapper defendant listened calmly as Assistant United States Attorney Cecil Heflin accused him of "deliberate, cold-blooded murder."

The jury of 10 men and two women was told that Landis had ceased to love his wife and even in the absence of divorce action had planned to marry Miss Virginia Lee Simpson, a former student nurse at Episcopal Eye, Nose and Throat Hospital. Miss Simpson was in the courtroom yesterday and is expected to testify tomorrow.

Mrs. Landis, her head battered and crushed, was found early on the morning of March 24 in a desolate section of northeast Washington near Twentieth and Taylor streets.

Yesterday's principal Government witness was Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, chief deputy coroner, who described the injuries which caused the young wife's death. He said Mrs. Landis was beaten with terrific force and there were scratches and fingerprints on her neck.

Her head, said Dr. Murphy, bore multiple lacerations and her skull was fractured in several places. She lived two days after the beating, he added.

Except for the woman's battered head, said Dr. Murphy, there were no other marks of violence on her body.

Heflin handed the deputy coroner a large brick during direct examination and asked him to identify it. Dr. Murphy said it was found near Mrs. Landis' body and at the time it was discovered was covered with blood and matted hair.

"In my opinion," said Dr. Murphy, "this stone caused the girl's death and was used as a bludgeon."

In his opening statement, Prose-

Senate Passes Bill to Decrease Wheat Acreage

Agriculture Fund Measure Sent President; Flood Projects Approved.

Legislative speed in sharp contrast with previous deliberateness yesterday completed Congressional action on a number of measures long before the two houses.

The Senate, without debate, approved a bill providing a national wheat acreage of 55,000,000 acres to be permitted under the new farm act. It was sponsored by Senator McGill (Democrat), of Kansas, and was sent to the House, where there is pending a bill for 52,000,000 acres.

Congressional action is contemplated in view of provisions in the present act that would restrict farmers to 46,000,000 acres next year, considered a too-drastic reduction from approximately 80,000,000 acres planted this year.

Agriculture Bill Finished.

In the House, Representative Lamneck (Democrat), of Ohio, objected to the Senate bill, but later withdrew his objection, while telling the House:

"This proves our farm program hasn't worked in practice. I still think the agricultural program is a cock-eyed proposition, but I'm going to withdraw my opposition."

The Senate also sent to the White House a record Agriculture Department appropriation bill of $1,089,719,344.

A Senate-House committee agreed on a compromise flood control bill which would not require local contributions for reservoirs and dams. The Federal Government would hold title to land acquired for such projects.

Local contributions would be required for purely local works such as flood walls and levees.

The bill authorizes projects estimated to cost $375,000,000, but makes no appropriation.

The Senate Appropriations Committee approved the $279,414,000 deficiency bill, an increase of $1,792,000 over the sum approved by the House. The Senate committee recommended an increase from $2,250,000 to $4,500,000 for Administrative expenses of the United States Housing Authority and from $50,000,000 to $56,052,000 for refunds of taxes under the Bankhead cotton act, the Kerr tobacco act and the potato act. It also included these sums.

Venereal disease work by the Public Health Service, $1,500,000; experiments with forest products by the Agriculture Department, $200,000; administrative expenses of the National Bituminous Coal Commission, $500,000.

Phosphate Inquiry Sped.

Other measures passed by the Senate included a joint resolution for a Congressional inquiry of phosphate resources; a bill designed to encourage travel to and within the United States; a bill authorizing sale of surplus power developed under the Uncompahgre River reclamation project in Colorado.

In the House, Representative Barton (Republican), New York), attacked the resolution to create a quasi-Congressional-executive committee to investigate monopolies as an "antijob bill" or the bill "for increasing unemployment." The House Rules Committee voted to give the resolution right of way on the floor.

Of the investigation, Barton said: "The facts which it proposes to uncover are already well known by the Federal Trade Commission and the Securities Exchange Commission. They are well known to all businessmen.

Calls It Campaign Aid.

"The investigation is purely political and designed to influence the fall campaign. Prominent businessmen will be dragged before a drum-head court; headlines will be filled with well-known names; situations and practices that are entirely legal and fully understood will be given a sinister interpretation. The whole purpose is to divert the attention of the people from the mistakes of government and try to make them believe that business is the ol' devil responsible for the depression and the loss of their jobs . . . The effect will be to cause more upheaval and uncertainty and throw more people out

The Senate passed and sent to the House a bill by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, to reroute the Colonial National Historical Parkway in Virginia from Williamsburg to Jamestown Island.

Under previous plans, the route was to be north and west of Williamsburg, thence to the James River at Glass House Point. The revised route, approved by the National Park Service, would take the parkway southward through or around Williamsburg, then due south to the James and along the river for several miles before crossing to Jamestown Island.

The Senate passed a bill, requiring the labeling of fabrics to show buyers the percentage of virgin and reclaimed wools and other fibers.

Senator Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming and other Western Senators argued during debate on the measure it was needed to protect consumers from misrepresentations. However, Senators Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, contended it would be impossible to enforce the labeling requirements because of the inability to distinguish virgin from other types of wool.

A bill to establish a division in the Public Health Service to control stream pollution was sent to the White House.

The measure authoried a $1,000,000 appropriation each year. Of that sum, the Government could use $700,000 for grants to the States to pay up to 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials for individual pollution control projects.

The bill went to conference nearly a year ago. An agreement was reached last week.

A resolution by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, calling upon the Secretary of Agriculture to investigate methods of expanding exports of tobacco and increasing markets for tobacco by products was voted by the Senate.

The measure asked the Secretary to investigate "immediately" the possibilities of increased exports of all grades of tobacco and tobacco products, and to "formulate and give full consideration to a plan or plans for increasing such exports and enabling such exports to be made on a subsidized basis."

The resolution directed an investigation into the use of by-products of tobacco, "and especially the use of nicotine as an insecticide and the cost of its manufacture," with a view to increasing the markets for such by-products.

Notes

The adjustment committee of U. F. W. A. Locals No. 10, SSB, has submitted recommendations for consideration by the 1939-40 budget makers, with the following points emphasized: (1) money sufficient to eliminate overtime in the board; (2) money sufficient to insure administrative promotions during each year to at least 50 per cent of the board's staff earning under $2,600, and (3) money sufficient to insure reclassification for all board employes who are now underclassified. Consideration of the 1939-40 budget will probably not be completed until the fall of this year, and the locals will welcome suggestions on the recommendations from their members. . . .

Alcatraz is a tough spot—even for the guards. Figures recently presented by the Director of Prisons show that the average number of hours worked by officers on the "rock" is 56.6 weekly. So when the prisoners squawk about their detention, maybe the guards reply: "You're no worse off than we are putting in as many hours as you prisoners."

SSB Jottings: They want to make it clear that you can get a duplicate card if you lose the original. All you must do is prove that you once were assigned a social security account number. Each worker keeps the same account number all his life; no one else is ever given that particular number . . . Some families or estates of insured workers, who died during the past 17 months, have not yet submitted claims for lump sum payment of old-age insurance, although they have a right to do so. Information and assistance in filing claims is afforded free of charge at the SSB offices in the Bond Building . . . It is not necessary to retire from work at the age of 65 in order to receive a lump-sum payment under the social security act old-age insurance program. A lump sum is paid to a worker who reaches the age of 65, and who has worked at any time since 1936, in an employment covered by the old-age insurance provisions of the act. The lump-sum payment amounts to 3½ per cent of the wages the worker has received during the covered period. It is paid all at one time, with one check. No more.

The I. D. R. A. sends tidings regarding its June Moon dance Friday night in the cafeteria: "To repeat, many memorable dates occur during June. There is Flag Day, the 14th; the longest day of the year on the 21st, and for the many Southerners' benefit, there is Jefferson Davis' anniversary on the 3d. Consequently, let it not be said afterward that any member of the Association missed the gay and festive June Moon dance on the 17th. You will meet lovely personages whom you never knew worked under beneath the same roof with you, and without doubt you will be greatly edified, and you'll be in the coolest spot in town. Dress will be informal—and informality will reign romantically . . . Explanation: Early announcements went out, which were endorsed by the executive committee, linking the social event with the observance of Flag Day. But what's a goup of Benedicks going to do when the love-sick lads and lassies clutch their beating hearts, gaze soulfully skyward, and plead for romance? You've got to give it to them, that's all. You can put any message across with a platform of bigger and better moons and more and more romance. We're for it. So are we!

Wallace Says He 'Never Met' Gomer Smith

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace said in formal statement yesterday that he had "never met" nor discussed the 1938 farm law with Representative Gomer Smith, rival of Senator Elmer Thomas for Oklahoma's Democratic senatorial nomination.

This statement handed newsmen by one of President Roosevelt's official family promptly was interpreted by politicians as new evidence of Administration interest in the outcome of State Senatorial primaries.

Capitol Hill generally has understood that the White House favored Thomas' candidacy for renomination and re-election. President Roosevelt himself will go through Oklahoma on a cross-continental trip beginning July 7.

Denies Meeting Smith.

Wallace's statement said:

"My attention has been called to statements made in Oklahoma by Mr. Gomer Smith to the effect that he had conferred with me about the agricultural bill of 1938. He quotes statements which he says were made by me with regard to the bill before its passage.

"To my best recollection I have never met Mr. Smith. The records of my office do not indicate that Mr. Smith has been in the office since his election to Congress.

"It is of course possible that he was among some of the large delegations with whom I have shaken hands, but certainly I have had no discussions with him about this bill or any other matter."

Meanwhile Barry Bingham, publisher of the Louisville Times and Courier Journal, said after a White House visit that he had talked over with President Roosevelt "things in general, including Kentucky politics."

Bingham, son of the late Ambassador to London, Robert W. Bingham, declined to tell reporters further details.

Johnston Reassured.

Columbia, S. C., June 13 (AP).—Gov. Olin D. Johnston, one of two avowed New Deal supporters opposing Senator E. D. Smith for renomination in the August 30 Democratic primary, said in a statement here today he had been assured "of the continued friendly co-operation of the President of the United States—co-operation for the best interests of South Carolina."

Johnston issued his statement shortly after he paid the $1,000 entry fee, and signed the pledge required of all Democratic candidates.

He and State Senator Edgar A. Brown, of Barnwell, had both previously announced for the race as New Dealer advocates.

His statement said:

"Much has been said concerning my friendship with the President of the United States. Today, in filing my pledge as a candidate for the United States Senate, I would be an unforgivable ingrate were I not a loyal friend to the best friend South Carolina has ever had. . . .

"As I enter the contest for the Senate, it is no secret that I have been assured of the continued friendly co-operation of the President of the United States—co-operation for the best interests of South Carolina."

Alabamans to Vote.

Birmingham, Ala., June 13 (AP).—Democratic voters in Alabama's Third Congressional District will choose tomorrow between a veteran New Dealer, Henry B. Steagall, and a political newcomer, J. Hubert Farmer, in a run-off primary election. Other congressional posts in Alabama, where Democratic nomination generally is equivalent to election, were decided in a first primary May 3.

Earle Asks "Graft" Arrest.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 13 (AP).—Gov. George H. Earle, named with members of his cabinet in a petition for a grand jury investigation of primary campaign charges of graft and coercion, demanded tonight that those named should be arrested and immediately brought to trial.

The petition was filed last week with the Dauphin County Court (Harrisburg) and the State Supreme Court by the Dauphin County district attorney, Carl B. Shelley.

In a State-wide radio address the Governor said that if Shelley has evidence "it is his sworn duty to arrest those whom he accuses."

Earlier today, in Philadelphia, the State Supreme Court, at the Governor's request, delayed until Friday further action on Shelley's petition to permit the grand jury inquiry of the conduct of the Governor and 13 others, prominent in the Earle administration.

New Air Board, Sea Labor Bills Are Completed

Congress Finally Approves 2 Measures Creating 12 New Jobs.

By the Associated Press.

Congress set its final O. K. yesterday on bills designed to improve the United States sea and sky commercial fleets.

One sets up a civil aeronautics authority, a new independent Federal agency, to centralize all Governmental controls over aviation.

The other amends the 1936 ship subsidy act in an effort to facilitate construction and operation of an American merchant marine to keep pace with a larger Navy.

The two bills provide for appointment of 12 new Federal officials, 6 at $12,000 a year, 3 at $10,000 and 3 at $7,500.

Most of the jobs would be in the aeronautics authority. It would consist of an administrator and five board members at $12,000 each and a subordinate air safety board of three at $7,500 each.

Scope of the work of the five-member board would include control over airmail contracts now handled by the Postoffice Department, rates and fares now set by the Interstate Commerce Commission and licenses and inspection now handled by the Bureau of Air Commerce.

The safety board would investigate airplane crashes and recommend methods of eliminating perils of flying.

The maritime act amendments include creation of a new maritime labor board of three members at $10,000 annually. They could attempt to keep labor peace on ships and on the waterfront, but could not interfere with existing Federal labor laws or agencies.

The legislation requires the board to suggest a permanent maritime labor plan to Congress by March 1, 1940.

Meanwhile the maritime commission awarded contracts for reconditioning of three liners to the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation of New York City and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., of Newport News.

Securities Body Opens Drive to Control Trusts

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission began yesterday a campaign for Federal regulation of investment trusts and companies.

Sending to Congress the first part of its report on a three-year investigation of investment trusts, the commission said formation of investment companies had been "materially facilitated by the virtual absence of statutory restraint or governmental regulation or supervision."

Commissioner Robert E. Healy, in charge of the investigation, said specific recommendations of the commission would not be disclosed until the next session of Congress.

Yesterday's report was confined to stating purposes and methods of the investigation and giving a brief history of investment trusts.

These were defined as firms in which more than one half of the assets consisted of securities of other companies.

The report stated that only about 40 investment companies were formed in the United States prior to 1921, and that the investment trust movement got under way with formation of about 120 more companies from 1921 to 1927.

By 1936 a total of 1,272 companies had been formed, but only 559 survived bankruptcy, consolidations and other causes of dissolution. A selected group of 22 companies which failed after the 1929 crash was said by the commission to have lost $510,000,000 of the $560,000,000 invested in them.

In 1929, the report said, the market value of assets in investment companies totaled about $7,000,000,000, which shrank to $2,800,000,000 in 1932, rose to $3,700,000,000 in 1933, jumped to $4,500,000,000 in 1936, and fell back to about $3,700,000,000 in 1937. About 1,500,000 investors were estimated to hold securities of investment companies.

Detailed statistics will be made available by the commission in wto weeks. Public hearings will two weeks. Public hearings will

A sharp behind-the-scenes contest for the now vacant post of Chairman of the Senatorial Democratic Campaign Committee was in progress at the Capitol yesterday.

Three candidates were in the running. Senate Majority Leader Barkley planned a meeting of the 29 Democrats up for re-election to choose a successor for the job vacated by Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania.

Guffey resigned the chairmanship last year after he was bitterly criticized in the Senate for attacks on Democratic Senators who opposed the court plan.

Guffey was appointed by the late Senate Leader Joe Robinson, but his successor, Barkley, has never filled the vacancy. He reportedly favors the candidacy of Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, stalwart New Dealer, but will yield to wishes of a majority of those up for re-election.

Court plan opponents, faced with threats of a party "purge," are opposing the appointment of Green, and are seeking a chairman who is not a "100 per cent" Administration man. Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, was urged to seek the office but turned it down.

Two others whose names figure in the contest, both more acceptable than Green to some nine anti-Administration Democrats running for re-election, are Senator Connally, of Texas, and Senator Brown, of Michigan. Both opposed the court plan, but generally vote along Administration lines.

U. S. Note Conversions Are $1,186,631,200

The Treasury said yesterday that holders of Treasury notes maturing in June and September will receive in exchange $918,849,600 of new 2¾ per cent 20-to-25 year Treasury bonds and $267,781,600 of new 1⅛ per cent 5-year Treasury notes.

Holders of the maturing securities were given their choice between the bonds and notes and those who accepted neither will be paid off in cash.

Out of the total of $1,214,000,000 of maturing notes, exchanges were accepted for $1,186,631,200 worth. The new bonds were accepted by $571,740,200 of the June note holders and $347,109,400 of the September holders. Notes were taken by $36,153,600 of the June holders and $231,628,000 of the September holders.

$6,235 Given in D. C. For Relief in China

Contributions to the Chinese Civilian Relief Fund over the week-end brought gifts of $6,235.97, a sum $1,764 short of the goal, the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Red Cross announced.

"Relief funds already remitted to China are being made to reach as many as possible, but amounts so far received have only touched the fringes of actual need," the Rev. Jacquinot de Besanges, S. J., scientist and humanitarian, recently returned from China, said. Contributions are being received at 1730 E street northwest, the District chapter's offices.

Bankhead Names Four For Hay Celebration

Speaker Bankhead yesterday named four Representatives to a special Senate-House committee to represent Congress at the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Hay at Salem, Ind., October 2-8.

They were Representatives Crowe (Democrat), of Indiana; Crosser (Democrat), of Ohio; Fries (Republican), of Illinois, and Wadsworth (Republican), of New York. Vice President Garner has not yet appointed Senate committeemen.

Temperature Heading Upward After Respite

Slightly warmer weather was forecast for this afternoon after a brief respite from the torrid weather of the week-end.

The mercury dropped to a low of 60 degrees at 6 a. m. yesterday, 35 degrees below the high of 95 degrees recorded Sunday. Yesterday's high was 75 degrees at 4 p. m.

RailAid Session Today to Speed Adjournment

Labor Chiefs Will Confer; Garner Picks Wednesday for Quitting.

good." This "news," it was understood, would mean that the entire body of Railway Labor Executives, meeting in emergency session at the Hamilton Hotel at 10 a. m., had decided to withdraw their previously stated opposition to the bill.

That opposition was based on the fact that the railroads had announced a 15 per cent wage cut, effective July 1, and the labor chiefs wanted a quid pro quo arrangement whereby if their opposition to the RFC bill were withdrawn the carriers would withdraw their wage cut. This fell through, as some of the railroads are not keen for the RFC bill, which would vastly increase the RFC's powers in rail reorganizations, and all were intent on the wage slash.

Measure Attacked.

As a result, Senate opponents of the measure, headed by Senator La Follette (Progressive) of Wisconsin, attacked the RFC measure and forced its recommitment to the Banking Committee.

Endeavors were made over the week-end to arrange another deal, whereby the railroads would withdraw their opposition to the Wagner-Crosser bill, setting up a separate unemployment compensation system for railroad workers, if the labor heads would abandon their fight against the RFC-rail bill.

Action of the labor executives this morning will signify whether the deal was completed; the unemployment compensation bill whooped through the House without a single voice raised in opposition yesterday, and was set for quick Senate passage today. No carrier opposition of any sort was presented to it and none is expected.

Wage Cut Fought.

La Follette said yesterday that no matter what the union heads do today, he will oppose the RFC bill unless it is amended to provide that no loan will be granted by the RFC to any railroad which participates in the wage-cut. Chances of such an amendment were slim, indeed. Whether La Follette's opposition will be without floor support was unknown ast night.

All plans for legislation amending section 77 of the bankruptcy act, to speed up rail reorganizations, were abandoned yesterday as Wheeler and the Administration were unable to get together on a measure. An Administration bill, drafted at the request of Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman, by A. A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, was unsatisfactory to Wheeler and other railroad students on Capitol Hill.

Wheeler said yesterday that he believed rushing through such complex and technical legislation without hearings at this late date might not do justice to all parties concerned. He intends to co-operate with the RFC, the ICC and other interested Government departments during the summer in the drafting of comprehensive rail legislation, with hearings in the fall to polish up a measure for presentation to the next Congress.

Wage-Hour Bill to Pass.

Senator Barkley, who said several times yesterday that no rail legislation was contemplated during the closing days of the session, later admitted that he meant no "new" rail legislation. While this would bar rail reorganization legislation, it would not hinder passage of either the unemployment compensation or the RFC measure.

The wage-hour bill, reported favorably to both chambers in a unanimously signed conference report, is scheduled for action in both Senate and House tomorrow. Quick passage is expected, as all sides have expressed satisfaction with the final compromise.

The exact position of the President in the rail legislation situation was uncertain to some extent. While the leaders were definitely not pushing either the RFC bill or the unemployment compensation bill openly, neither were they discouraging the passage of the measures. Sources close to the White House said last night that the Administration really wanted enactment of some sort of amendment to the bankruptcy act to speed up reorganizations, as it was said the Administration fears the rail crisis might pull down recovery once it gets under way. Without speedy rail reorganizations possible, the situation would remain acute for many months, with reorganizations blocked by minority groups of rail securityholders.

Quick determination of the impasse was probable today, as all Congressional appetites were whetted for adjournment, with an "out-of the window" attitude for any bills that cannot be whipped through in jigtime.

Girl 'Bit' Player Breaks Up Scene, But Is Rewarded

A "bit player" working at Universal studios in the latest Crime Club film, "Danger on the Air," ruined a perfect "take" and was rewarded for doing so.

She became so frightened at a blood-curding scream which is part of the film, that she shrieked also.

"Cut," Director Otis Garrett called. He called the girl to him.

"Young lady, do you know that you have ruined a perfectly good scene?" he said. "Now go back there and see if you can do it exactly the same way again. We can use that scream of yours in the picture."

Many of these features and services are appearing in The Post today, and the others will follow soon. Miss Thompson's column will start in The Post as soon as she returns from a vacation in September, and Lippmann's will begin appearing the first week in July.

A cablegram from Lippmann, who now is in Sorrento, Italy, was read to the radio audience last night. It said:

"Eugene Meyer, Washington Post, Washington.

"Congratulations and good wishes. You have made an honest, competent and liberal newspaper. Am happy to be joining you."

The heart of a metropolitan newspaper is the "City Room," and it was here that last night's broadcast began as the radio audience was introduced to the process of getting out The Post. John J. Riseling, veteran city editor, a Washington newspaper man since August 3, 1914, told how his staff of 30 covered the city and its environs, and then amidst the clatter of the typewriters the microphone was moved to the desk of William Nessly, another Post veteran, chief of the National News Bureau, who gave the listeners a tip on the latest news from Capitol Hill.

Picture Process Described.

Howard Wentworth, who for two consecutive years has won C. I. T. awards for his Post articles on traffic safety, told how traffic fatalities have been cut down here and outlined plans for promoting even greater safety.

Hugh Miller, The Post's picture editor, told how a wirephoto is transmitted, say, from the Santa Anita race track in California to Washington in eight minutes.

Arthur Chamberlain, the telegraph editor, outlined the biggest wire story of the day, and then the microphone was moved over to the desk of Gerald Gross, The Post's Zoo expert. Jerry gave the latest gossip about Snowy, the polar bear, and the other denizens of the Zoo.

Charles Moore, the man with the microphone, took the radio audience to Scott Hart, author of the "Federal Diary", to James Cutlip, head of the copy desk, and then went on to the bedlam of the wire room, where Assocated Press and United Press teletype machines were bringing in news from the ends of the earth and telegraphers were taking stories from The Post's own correspondents.

Now the microphone was taken into the composing room, another noisy spot, where Noel Lynn, the foreman, described how news articles and features are set in type, placed in forms and made ready for the presses.

Leake Directs Makeups.

Lowell L. Leake, assistant managing editor, was found in the composing room supervising the making up of The Post pages, which twice in three years have won honorable mention in the N. W. Ayer Competition for Typographical Excellence.

William Becker, mechanical superintendent of The Post, told of the vast quantity of paper and ink that goes into the making of the newspaper each year.

Shirley Povich, The Post's baseball writer and sports commentator; Walter Haight, the turf expert; Jack Paulis, the sports editor, and Nelson Bell, the dramatic editor, were encountered here and there by the man with the microphone, and then a visit was made to the third floor, where are located the women's and society departments.

Here were Jean Green, The Post's food editor; Mary Haworth, who annually receives 20,000 letters asking advice; Jessie Ash Arndt, the club editor; Dudley Harmon, society reporter; Hope Ridings Miller, society editor, and Malvina Lindsay, woman's editor.

Editorial Conferences.

The next stop was the office of Felix Morley, editor of The Post, who in 1936 won the Pulitzer Editorial Award "for clearness of style, sound reasoning and power to influence public opinion in what the writer believes to be the right direction."

"There is a vital distinction between the editorials and all the other material published in The Post," Morley said. "Only the former represent the policy of this paper. That is the reason for their anonymity. The argument of every important editorial is determined in broad outline before a single word is written.

"This agreement takes place at the editorial conference, held every morning and lasting up to an hour or even longer, according to the degree of unanimity among the staff as to the issue under consideration.

"The customary procedure at these conferences is for the editor to take up one by one the topics which he has listed as deserving notice on the editorial page for the following day. Ideas for editorials also come from subscribers, including prominent Government employes, from whom advice is always welcome. Some of our best editorials have sprung from ideas contributed by the publisher, who frequently drops in at the conference and participates in the general give-and-take. It is noteworthy that he always suggests and never directs that an editorial should be written."

Mrs. Meyer Speaks.

Apropos The Post's successful crusade to clean up Washington's alley slums, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher and a working member of The Post staff, said:

"The Washington Post fights day in, day out for the welfare of Washington's citizens and especially for those who most need help, the unemployed.

"Last Christmas we appealed to the whole community to help the 25 neediest cases. The D. C. Council of Social Agencies selected the families. Their case records were published not only to raise funds but to call attention to the fact that the employable unemployed are left to shift for themselves in the Nation's Capital, because Congress, as usual, had cut the relief appropriation to the bone. The response to this Christmas appeal was so generous that The Post was able to help not only the 25 families originally selected but 26 more.

"A Washington newspaper has peculiar opportunities for usefulness to the community because of our loose, haphazard arrangement with Congress that is called a government. In the perpetual guerrilla warfare that goes on between the Congressional committees and our citizens, there is no doubt where The Post stands.

Miller Tells of Thrills.

"But The Post has time to organize more peaceful pursuits of a cultural nature as well. Only recently the National Folk Festival gave great pleasure to 17,000 people at six performances. Over 500 participants from 30 different States proved how rich and varied and colorful our American traditions are. Let me take this opportunity to thank all the organizations, especially the teachers of the public school system, without whose help that unusual event could not have been such an outstanding success.

Harlan Miller, who came from the tall corn country to write "Over the Coffee," a column that now appears in 26 cities, was asked about his biggest thrill since coming to Washington.

"Well, there's some excitement every day in Washington," he said. "One big thrill was meeting Mrs. Jimmy Roosevelt right after I'd said in my column that I wished she'd put on 10 or 15 pounds."

Managing Editor Jones was introduced as "the man who gets all of the brickbats, all the worries, all the headaches."

"There is no secret in the reason for the progress of The Washington Post in the past five years," he said. "It is simply the policy of the publisher to give Washington the best newspaper, from the standpoint of news, editorial and feature content, that brains, initiative and hard work can produce.

Sullivan Lauds Publisher.

"Thus the news columns of The Post have been greatly expanded to cover every activity in the District of Columbia. An immense amount of work has been done to speak with authority in the editorial columns. There is a never-ending search for the best features obtainable.

"So, it is with real pleasure that I am able to announce tonight that, in line with this policy, The Post is adding new and important features which will bring pleasure and profit to our ever-increasing family of readers."

To a drum and cymbal fanfare, the new features — Lippmann, Thompson, Sullivan and the others —were then announced.

The transcription of a chat between Dorothy Thompson and Eugene Meyer was recorded and then Mark Sullivan faced the microphone to say:

"Mr. Meyer and I have been friends for most of our mature lifetimes. Even were he not my friend, I should admire him. Many careers have been open to him, including during recent years, the career of leisure, if he chose to follow it.

Interpretation a Function.

"But he has chosen to work very hard, in ways that contribute to the public good. For some 15 years he served with great usefulness in public offices which carried high responsibility, including the headship of the Federal Reserve Board. When he retired from that, he might reasonably have enjoyed the repose which he had earned, and which he was able to command. But he chose to buy a newspaper in the National Capital, and to spend laborious days—and also laborious nights as a morning newspaper man must—in making it a better newspaper. This is a fine American spirit; for it I have strong admiration for Mr. Meyer.

"He is now going to print in Washington the articles I write, and he invites me tonight to speak to his readers. What these articles of mine attempt, Post readers will soon know for themselves. They will know also what sort of person the writer is, for readers always and necessarily see the personality of an author between the lines of what he writes.

"My own notion about the purpose of these articles is that they try to interpret. Interpretation, if adequately done, is especially useful and necessary just now. For the issues before the country are very new and very intricate.

"To clarify these new issues and proposals is a function of newspaper commentators. How adequately it may be done by the particular commentator who now addresses you, you will learn soon, and form your own judgment. I am glad of the opportunity to become acquainted with The Post's readers, and hope I may have the good fortune to make friends with them."

Richards Vidmer, author of "Down In Front," recalled the days when he was a patient at Walter Reed and a student of George Washington University. Son of an Army officer, Vidmer left West Point to get active service as a flier and was injured in a crash. He "broke in" as a sports writer in this city, later going to New York.

Lucius Beebe, famed chronicler of New York's "cafe society," described Washington as "a civilized and urbane North American community."

At this point, the program shifted from The Post Building to Europe. From across the Atlantic came the voices of two men whose dispatches henceforth will be seen frequently in this newspaper—Lawrence Hills, European manager of the New York Herald Tribune, speaking from Paris, and Joseph Driscoll, London correspondent of the same organization, speaking from the British capital.

Hills listed the far-flung staff of reporters who cover Europe for the New York Herald Tribune, and whose dispatches henceforth will appear in The Post. All of them are top-flight men—Elliott in Berlin, Bond in Moscow, Dietz in Vienna and Driscoll in London.

Driscoll, a former star reporter in New York who covered, among other stories, the Hauptmann trial, said that the fact that London was five hours ahead of Washington was both an advantage and a disadvantage. On the one hand, he said, there was no need to rush in order to catch editions here, but on the other he and his colleagues had to work far into the night and morning.

He predicted that Lord Halifax, Great Britain's foreign secretary, would not remain in office for the remainder of the year.

Mr. Meyer was the last to go on the air. He said:

"We are celebrating tonight the completion of five years under the present management of The Washington Post. Here with our staff of editors, newsmen, business department, circulation, artists and feature writers, including our out-of-town guests, and last but not least the fine people of our mechanical departments, we join with our constituency, the men and women of Washington and vicinity, so many of whom unseen are listening in on the air.

Meyer Thanks People.

"You ask me and you have a right to ask me, 'How have you discharged your trust?' I will answer you. It is true in fact that the ownership and publication of a morning paper in Washington is a great public trust.

"With a background of 16 years in public service I have tried to make my direction of The Washington Post conform to the public interest of the citizens of Washington and of the Nation, judged by the highest standards of public service.

"You ask 'How is this being done?' I say that the only way this can be done, so far as I know, is first, to create and uphold the ideal to be followed. Next, and this is easy to say, but it takes time and patience to achieve, is the organizing of a group of men and women who have already or who are capable of accepting and making that ideal their own, in the full sense of the word.

"I desire tonight to thank the people of Washington for their support and encouragement and also to express my gratitude to every member of our loyal staff. With the help of my splendid associates I shall continue to labor to give Washington an ever-improving newspaper."

Lucius Beebe Calls Sen. Lewis 'Best Dressed'

Beebe

trays . . .

"But I was talking about Senator Jim Ham Lewis; Mr. Roosevelt has been nominated for the best-dressed title, but I consider him a phony as compared with the Senator from Illinois . . . There's a man in his clothes and clothes on the man . . . We always used to think of Cabot Lodge as a well-dressed man, but he wore no undershirt; that's insidious and no suit will atone for it. . . But back to the parties:

"I think of the Sunday evening levees of Mrs. Aileen Winslow, of Cleveland! These are the last convocations of authentic urbanity . . .

2 Best Dressed Cities.

"Curious how I was just turning it over in my head. I mean the two best dressed cities in America; one is New Haven, the other San Francisco . . . They dress in New Haven, I suppose, because of the college influence, and in San Francisco because it is the most urbane place in the United States . . . But my fancy strays; I was speaking of Washington . . .

"Judging from most of the women I've met at cocktail parties, I'm firmly convinced from my infrequent contacts with social Washington that Claire Luce got most of the original characters for "The Women" from cocktail parties in company with congressmen's wives . . .

"I shan't expatiate on Washington dress, generally, but isn't it a little . . . I mean a little like country folk in sports clothes? . . . One thing did interest me—all the current agitation about erecting a country club or some place of public gathering for them. What's the matter? Aren't there enough saloons to hold all the Federal employes in this supposedly most affluent capital of the world?"

Beebe flicked a microscopic speck of dust from the razor crease of his trousers. "Wouldn't there seem to be enough?" he inquired.

Anti-Syphilis Work Threatened by Cut In Appropriations

A severe setback to the forthcoming nation-wide drive against veneral diseases was feared yesterday, even before it was launched, when the Senate Appropriations Committee approved only $1,500,000 for the first year's work.

The item is included in the last deficiency bill, now facing action by the Senate. The La Follette-Bulwinkle bill signed last month by President Roosevelt authorized $3,000,000 to be spent during the first year of the antisyphilis drive.

United States Public Health Service officials made no official statement on the proposed $1,500,000 appropriation, but a spokesman indicated the program will be badly handicapped if a greater allotment is not granted.

He said he hopes the amount will be increased in conference. The House has not yet made an appropriation, inasmuch as the authorizing bill was signed one day too late for insertion of the item in the House deficiency measure.

Craig to Accept V. F. W. Medals for C. M. T. C.

Forty-four medals to be presented to outstanding C. M. T. C. students this year will be accepted on behalf of the War Department at 10 a. m. today by Gen. Malin Craig, Army Chief of Staff.

The decorations, donated by the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will be presented to Gen. Craig by a delegation which will include Lieut. Col. Harry Coope, U. S. Army, chairman of the V. F. W., and Lieut. Charles Weickhardt, U. S. Navy, retired.

Battle Testimony In Harlan Record

London, Ky., June 13 (AP).—Federal Judge Ford announced after a lawyers' conference today the 44 individual defendants in the Harlan antiunion conspiracy trial must go on the stand first—if at all—when the defense begins to present its case.

He gave the defense permission, however, to bring into the case—as possible evidence of a motive for operators' resistance to organization efforts of the United Mine Workers of America—facts relating to the 1931 battle of Evarts, in which two deputy sheriffs and a coal miner were killed.

Court recessed until tomorrow less than a half hour after starting because of the illness of a juror.

South Carolina Counts Its Active Voters Here

South Carolinians of Washington were reminded yesterday by H. J. Lane, president of the Washington Young Democrats of South Carolina, that July 26 is last registration day for the South Carolina primary of August 30. Party leaders plan, in connection with the leection, a survey to determine how many of approximately 4,000 South Carolinians in the Capital area still are active in affairs of their State.

D. C. Man Wills Va. U. $500,000 Book Collection

New University Library to Be Enlarged to House McGregor Gift.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., June 13.—Coinciding with dedication of a $1,000,000 library at the University of Virginia today came announcement of a gift of 12,500 books, which will make the university a research center for students of American history.

Valued at between $300,000 and $500,000, the collection was gathered by the late Tracy W. McGregor, book lover and philanthropist who spent his latter years in Washington. The gift was announced by John Lloyd Newcomb, president of the university and successor to its first president, Edwin Alderson Alderman, in whose memory the new library was constructed.

The McGregor Fund, the foundation to which Mr. McGregor left his estate, will provide $25,000 for changes which must be made in the building's rare book room to house the large collection. In addition, provisions have been made for a $10,000 annual grant to expand the McGregor collection during the next ten years.

Died In D. C. Hospital.

Mr. McGregor died in Garfield Hospital, Washington, two years ago, when he was 67. He had maintained an apartment in the Shoreham Hotel for several years and was a member of the Chevy Chase Club, the Cosmos Club and the First Congregational Church.

Among many welfare organizations in which he was active were the Thursday Organization, the National Probation Association and the National Committee on the Care of Transients and Homeless.

His sudden death put an unexpected end to his book collecting activities, which centered around source material on early American history. Among rare volumes now stored on a steel vault in the Alderman Library are works by Americus Vespucius and John Smith, John Eliot's translation of the Bible into Indian dialect and a separate 2,000-book collection of works by Cotton and Increase Mather.

Items from English literature include a second folio of Shakespeare, a 1608 quarto of King Lear and autographs of numerous English authors.

"Most Valuable."

President Newcomb referred to the gift as "the most valuable collection ever presented to a Southern institution" and expressed his belief that "the Alderman Library has become in the field of American history a center of research of national scope."

In the principal address of today's dedication, Dr. Dumas Malone, director of the Harvard University Press and formerly history professor at the University of Virginia, declared, "If the finger of destiny is not pointing in this direction, it ought to be! That there should be a great library here seems to me absolutely incontestable, in view of the history, location and spirit of the University of Virginia."

After the ceremony visitors were conducted through the five-floor building, built to accommodate 1,000 students. The 20 miles of shelves in the ten-book stacks provide space for 600,000 volumes and can be expanded to care for 3,000,000.

411 Get Degrees.

The university formally ended its 114th session this afternoon with exercises in which President Newcomb conferred degrees upon 411 graduates from 28 States and three foreign countries before several thousand spectators in picturesque open-air exercises in McIntire Theater.

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the Washington Cathedral and an alumnus of the University, addressed them on opportunities in a crowded world.

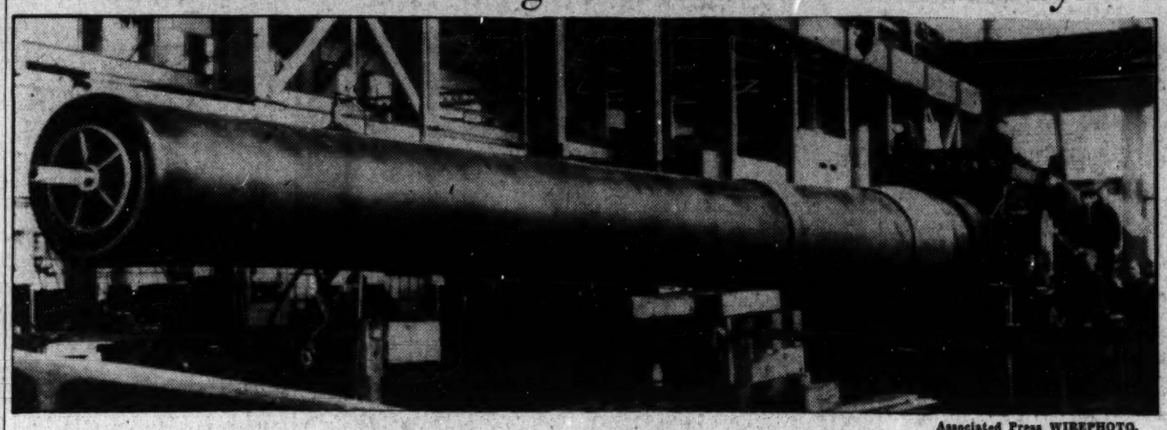
America's Answer to 'Big Berthas' of World War Days



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

This 16-inch stationary gun, among the world's largest, is being developed at the Watertown (Mass.) arsenal for coastal defense. Although it weighs 500 tons, it is constructed so one man, using one hand, can turn a crank to swing the gun on its turnstile. It will fire a projectile weighing more than a ton at a speed of 2,400 feet a second for a distance of 30 miles.

2 Autoists, Bus Driver Cleared Of 2 Fatalities

Another Bus Injures Boy Bicyclist as Coroner's Jury Acts.

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated three men, one a Capital Transit Co. bus operator, after inquests into two recent traffic deaths.

Dwight K. Denison, 29, 1701 West Virginia avenue northeast, bus driver, and James H. Harrdo, colored, 21, 2520 I street northwest, were absolved from blame in the death of Newton C. Davis, colored, 24, 1026 Thirty-first street northwest.

Davis was killed early Sunday when he was struck by Harrod's machine and thrown into the path of a bus driven by Denison in the 3000 block of M street northwest.

Arlington Driver Cleared.

Witnesses told the jury that the man, with several companions, walked into the path of Harrod's machine.

Herbert A. Breakley, 42, of Arlington, Va., was cleared in connection with the death of Henry Gough, 65, 3285 M street northwest, who died at Georgetown Hospital Saturday.

Gough was struck by Breakley's machine while crossing M street in the 3500 block northwest, last Tuesday. At the time, police charged the motorist with reckless driving.

The jury was told yesterday that the elderly man apparently became confused by traffic on the busy thoroughfare and darted into the path of Breakley's car.

Eugene Edwards, 16-year-old messenger, 3231 Volta place northwest, was injured seriously when he was struck by a bus at Twenty-second street and Massachusetts avenue northwest.

The boy, who was riding a bicycle, was taken to Emergency Hospital and treated for possible fractured skull, a broken collar bone and severe lacerations.

Police charged Alvin E. Hazzard, 26, 945 Longfellow street northwest, driver of the bus, with reckless driving. He was released in custody of a Capital Transit Co. attorney pending trial.

Bulkley Blocks Attack On Big Broadcasters

The Senate declared formally yesterday, at the request of Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, that it regards operation of radio stations with power in excess of 50 kilowatts as "definitely against the public interest."

Later, Senator Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, filed a motion to reconsider the action, holding up the resolution.

The resolution asserted that higher-powered broadcast licenses would "tend to concentrate political, social and economic power and influence in the hands of a very small group."

Army Building Coast Defense Gun With Range of 30 Miles

Watertown Arsenal Force Largest in History for Construction of Gigantic 16-Inch, 500-Ton Weapon, One of Biggest in World.

By the Associated Press.

Watertown, Mass., June 13.—With the largest force since wartime singing the song of armamment at Watertown Arsenal, men swarm like busy ants around the gunmakers' pride and joy—a 16-inch stationary gun for coastal defense.

One of the big guns of the world, it dwarfs the newly developed 8-inch railroad gun and the powerful 3-inch antiaircraft mounts.

Total weight of gun and mounting is 500 tons, but one man, using one hand, can turn a crank which swings the gun on its turnstile. It will fire a projectile weighing more than a ton at a speed of 2,400 feet a second for a distance of 30 miles. To ship it to the coast will require 10 flat cars.

As big as a small locomotive are the "cradle" and side-frames, which hold the gun barrel and hide the mechanism of elevation and recuperation for recoil. To stop it in recoil would be the same as stopping, in 4 feet, a 40,000-pound, loaded coal car, running wild down a mountain at 60 miles an hour.

Both the 8-inch and 16-inch mounts soon will be tried out at the Army's Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland.

Increased appropriations for antiaircraft in recent months have accounted for increasing the working force to close-to-wartime proportions. Increased from 741 to 952 in eight months, the craftsmen go about their work in buildings set far back from the street, while uniformed guards check every visitor.

'Drunk's' Witness Takes a Bracer, Gets Self in Toils

Clifton Venters had never seen the new Police Court Building before Saturday. Yesterday he had seen too much of it.

The 40-year-old colored man, who lives in the 100 block of Dingmans court northwest, went to court Saturday as witness for a friend charged with intoxication, and couldn't get out again for an obvious reason.

"Too bad you got tight before you came to court," commented Judge John P. McMahon as he fined Clifton $25.

Security Aid Given 135,570 in Region

A total of 135,570 persons received public assistance last month in the District and three nearby States, William L. Kilcoin, acting director of Region IV of the Social Security Board, announced yesterday.

An estimate of the funds necessary to meet obligations for public assistance last month gives the District $151,800; Maryland $552,500; North Carolina $434,900, and West Virginia $423,400. Kilcoin said 68,800 aged men and women; 63,200 dependent children, and 3,570 needy blind received assistance.

In addition, more than 60,000 needy persons in Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, West Virginia and the District, were given aid from the general relief funds.

Kennedy Confers With Chamberlain

London, June 13 (AP).—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy called at No. 10 Downing street today to see Premier Neville Chamberlain on one of the American's series of visits to British officials and foreign diplomats before sailing for home June 15.

Kennedy plans to report to President Roosevelt on the whole European situation. He expects to be in the United States nine days and will attend the graduation of his oldest son, Joseph, jr., from Harvard.

Warfield-Spencer Bridesmaid Takes Life in Illinois

Geneva, Ill., June 13 (AP).—Mrs. George C. Moseley, 44, former sister-in-law of the Duchess of Windsor and socially prominent in Chicago, was found dead in her garage today, with the engine of her automobile running. A Kane County coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide.

Mrs. Moseley was the mother of three sons, whose custody she was granted on her divorce on grounds of desertion from Moseley, a Chicago investment broker, in 1937. Her husband was a former star football player at Yale University.

Mrs. Moseley was a bridesmaid at the wedding of her brother, E. Winfield Spencer, in 1916, to Wallis Warfield, the present Duchess of Windsor.

Split on Values Halts TVA Step To Buy Utilities

Negotiations Suspended Till Points Are Cleared Up in Appraisal.

By the United Press.

Negotiations between the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation for sale of the latter's properties in the TVA area collapsed, at least temporarily, yesterday when officials could not agree on a valuation fixed by independent appraisers.

Announcement of the suspension was made after two conferences between TVA Director David E. Lilienthal and Wendell Willkie, C. & S. chairman. It was their first meeting since an appraisal of all C. & S. properties in the TVA area had been made by a private accounting firm.

A joint statement issued by the two said:

"Mr. Lilienthal and Mr. Willkie met today and discussed the question of the purchase by the TVA of certain properties of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation. After several hours discussion, there was a suspension of negotiations to a date to be fixed later."

Although Lilienthal and Willkie would not comment further, it was learned that technical questions in connection with the audit forced them to halt negotiations until the points can be ironed out to the satisfaction of both sides.

Biddle Stresses "Yardstick."

By the Associated Press.

Francis Biddle, chief counsel for the Tennessee Valley Authority Investigating Committee, said yesterday he believed the question of whether TVA was providing an "honest yardstick" of power costs was one of the "most essential" things the committee should determine.

Biddle reported to the ten-man committee yesterday. He told newspapermen he thought it was "(vital" that there be a determination of cost allocations in the Tva power program.

Critics of TVA have contended that the percentage of total costs charged to power production in the agency's bookkeeping is less than a fair amount.

Roosevelt's Plans For Wedding Role Rest on Congress

Nahant, Mass., June 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt's plans to attend the wedding of his youngest son, John, and Anne Lindsay Clark rested in the hands of Congress tonight.

The groom-to-be said his father wanted to come to this peninsular summer resort on the U. S. S. Potomac from Washington Friday, the day before the wedding, but that he would travel by train if Congressional business keeps him too long at the Capital.

If the President does come on the Potomac, he and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain the wedding party with a dance on shipboard Friday evening.

That and a dinner-dance Thursday at the Concord home of Miss Ledlie Laughlin, one of the bridesmaids, are the only prenuptial functions scheduled.

than a month ago the board unanimously adopted a 20-point program designed to eliminate factionalism in the union.

"A new and better understanding was developing rapidly among our members," Martin wrote, when, last Wednesday, "you, as leader of a recalcitrant group, sought . . . to arbitrarily overrule the action which had previously been taken by a unanimous vote of the international board, of which you were a party."

He declared that the [illegible] also held press conferences and released statements which "again placed the international union in a most unfavorable light in the headlines of the public press. By these actions you have done irreparable harm to the cause of the international union and the entire C. I. O."

"Upon you and your associates," Martin said, "will forever rest the full responsibility for having again injected destructive factionalism into our organization and having again frustrated the objects for which our union was organized."

Communists Blamed.

Following the suspension, Martin said at a press conference that he did not intend to see the union "used as a tool to assist or comfort any alien dictatorships."

"I have no more respect for a Stalin dictatorship," he continued, "than I have for a Hitler or Mussolini dictatorship, and that is none."

He declared the union had a "Communist element insignificant in size" but that it had influenced some "unthinking" members.

He said the radical element had opposed ratification of the peace agreement after the Chrysler strike of last year and that some of the members had conferred with Communist leaders.

Fat Women Smother in Tight Girdles

Tight girdles and stiff foundation garments actually make many women look fatter. Instead of squeezing your fat, why not have a slim, lovely, youthful figure that needs but little girdle control?

The Marmola way is the easy way to get rid of ugly fat caused by an internal deficiency. Marmola Prescription Tablets have been sold to the public for more than thirty years. More than twenty million boxes have been distributed during that period.

Marmola is not intended as a cure-all for all ailments. This advertisement is intended only for fat persons who are normal and healthy otherwise and whose fatness is caused by hypo-thyroidism with accompanying subnormal metabolic rates. No other representation is made as to this treatment except under these conditions and according to the dosage as recommended.

We do not make any diagnosis as that is the function of your physician, who must be consulted for that purpose. The complete formula is included in every package. Get Marmola at your druggist today and send that ugly fat on its way. (Adv.)

Senate Relief Inquiry Sought In 2 Drives; Blocking Charged

broadened. It would be just plain stupid to appoint a second committee, when we have already created this one."

Barkley denied he opposed an investigation of "politics in relief." But he said he wanted one "that would not be confined to the WPA, but would extend to spending of Federal highway funds, unemployment compensation, the Civilian Conservation Corps and everything else."

He is up for re-election in November, with Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler, of Kentucky, backed by a powerful State organization, running against him.

Audit Groups Divided.

The original Tydings resolution, signed by ten Democratic Senators of varying political views, has been before the Senate Audit Committee for several days. The committee has only four members, and two of their number, Chairman Byrnes and Senator Dieterich (Democrat), of Illinois, are said to oppose it. The other two members, Tydings and Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware, have strongly pressed for action.

After conferences with Byrnes yesterday Tydings began the draft of a compromise apparently designed to meet the wishes of Byrnes and Barkley. Although the Marylander declined to disclose details, it is expected to clothe the existing campaign expenditures committee with clear authority to make the inquiry.

Besides Sheppard, members of the regular campaign investigating committee include O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Brown, of Michigan (Democrats), and White, of Maine (Republican). Senator Shipstead (Farmer Labor), Minnesota, has resigned and his place has not been filled.

Byrnes said last night he intends to call both Barkley and Tydings before the Audit committee this morning before acting on investigation proposals.

Senator Byrd, of Virginia, and Gerry, of Rhode Island (Democrats), last night opposed authorizing the Sheppard committee to make the inquiry. King also pointed out that a similar committee in 1936 failed to hold hearings although charges of WPA activity were brought at that time.

Move for an investigation followed refusal of the Senate on three separate votes to write statutory prohibitions against "politics in relief" into the spending-lending bill.

Senator Wheeler in his radio speech last night charged the Senate had "inferentially condoned" WPA political activities and "other public authorities" had expressly defended them. (The President defended Hopkins' indorsement of Representative Wearin in his unsuccessful race against Senator Gillette in Iowa.)

"To my mind," said Wheeler, "there is not nor can there be any defense for playing politics with human misery."

Wheeler criticized efforts by employers "to destroy the independence of their workers," and added: "If I am right in condemning these corporate and private practices, I am much more right in condemning such practices on the part of Government officials."

He warned party leaders they will face voter indignation "if politics in relief is the means by which the Democratic Party seeks to maintain its dominance."

Wheeler said unemployed going on WPA rolls as a last resort regard "the slightest expression from WPA officials" as a command.

"The WPA worker will heed the word of him who satisfies his hunger, who clothes his body and who furnishes him shelter," he said. "No more fit subject for economic and political slavery can be found."

Minus bans on politics, 1938 relief and "pump priming" appropriations meantime were readied for final action today or tomorrow.

Still in disagreement on $212,000,000 for parity price payments to farmers, Congressional conferees finished work on the spending-lending bill after approving the Senate's $300,000,000 increasing in the Housing Administration's lending authority.

The farm parity price amendment will be carried back to the House for a separate vote today. Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, will ask the House to reject the $212,000,000 increase, but his fellow conferee, Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, will present a counter motion.

Cannon, who will move that the House recede and concur in the Senate farm price subsidy, predicted last night his action will be adopted by a "three-fourths majority." The farm amendment, providing price subsidies for wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco and rice farmers, would increase the total of the bill to about $3,753,000,000.

REA Slash Asked.

Conferees also will carry back to the House for a separate vote a proposal that administrative expenses of the Rural Electrification Administration be cut to $500,000. Both the House and Senate approved $100,000,000 in additional lending powers for the REA, but the Senate added $1,000,000 for administrative expenses.

Cut to $25,000,000 in the conference agreement were appropriations for direct relief. The Senate had earmarked $125,000,000 of the $1,425,000,000 work relief fund for this purpose. But the conference gave the President $175,000,000 leeway in use of WPA funds for emergencies, by making the Woodrum "fund-spreading" amendment rigidly applicable for only seven of the eight months the WPA appropriation will run.

The conferees, in increasing the lending authority of the Housing Administration from $500,000,000 to $800,000,000, rejected Senate legislative amendments making it easier for local communities to start low-cost housing projects. A Senate provision postponing indefinitely the 10 per cent local contribution required on projects was abandoned.

The WPA conference agreement as completed extends minimum rates of pay established in the wage-hour bill to WPA workers in similar occupations in the same locality. Prevailing wage rate guarantees also were extended. But the conference dropped from the bill a provision that WPA workers be paid at a rate of not less than $40 a month.

Roosevelt Calls On Advertising To Create Jobs

Cites 'Responsibility' to Maintain Distribution of Goods Produced.

Copyright, 1938, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Detroit, June 13.—President Roosevelt joined with advertising leaders here today in urging the power of advertising be utilized to aid in putting the Nation's unemployed millions back to work. The President's message, read by Mason Britton, chairman of the board of the Advertising Federation of America, at today's opening luncheon session of the federation's thirty-fourth annual convention, emphasized the importance of advertising in moving goods and hailed the convention's slogan, "Advertising Makes Work," as being of "great significance."

"Recovery," the President said, "will be accelerated and human happiness promoted in proportion to the spread of purchasing power through the employment of the greatest possible number of our workers in gainful pursuits."

Importance Recognized.

After wishing the convention success in its work, the President declared he recognized the "important position the service of advertising occupies in our national economy, a strategic relationship," he said, "that carries responsibility for the endeavor to maintain production through wider and more efficient distribution of the goods produced."

The President's message also touched on the truth-in-advertising theme. "Certainly," he said, "if advertising is to render the maximum of constructive service, it is fundamental that truth be the watchword and that every claim be supported by the highest standard of business ethics. "I believe," he concluded, "the leaders in this field sense their opportunity for promoting social and economic progress through trustworthy service."

Touch on Job Problem.

George F. Slocum, president of the Advertising Federation of America, in his keynote address, emphasized the importance of the country's unemployment problem. He called upon advertising and business men to unite as in a war, using all weapons of advertising, promotion and publicity at their command, to put men and women back to work.

Lee Anderson, president of the Lee Anderson Advertising Co., Detroit, speaking before the Newspaper Advertising Executives Association, also meeting here, said that he was confident advertising can put the unemployed millions back to work through persuading frightened money to return to the channels of commerce.

President, Leftists Bringing On Party Split, Says Moley

St. Paul, June 13 (AP).—Raymond Moley, magazine editor and one of President Roosevelt's advisers in 1933, said today Mr. Roosevelt and "the group" of left-wing liberals now surrounding and advising him are heading for a wide-open split of the Democratic Party unless they make a drastic change in their program.

"The present depression will continue as long as the group of left-wing liberals is in control at Washington and pursues its present taxation policies," he said.

Minister Walks Out on Them

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

The marriage of Andrea Luckenbach, 18, daughter of Edgar Luckenbach, shipping magnate, to William Dobbs, gentleman jockey and saddle salesman, scheduled for today, met an unexpected snag last night when the minister declined to officiate, according to a New York dispatch. The couple is shown above at Belmont. The pastor, the Rev. William Grimes, of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Great Neck, Long Island, declined because her father had not given his consent to the marriage, it was indicated. The vivacious Miss Luckenbach, who fled a girls' school in South Carolina last winter and turned up on a bus in Washington, was quoted as saying she had been disowned, but "I should worry."

ness done annually by such firms as Remington-Rand, Inc., often named by the NLRB as a violator.

Lewis, seated in the Speaker's office, called in two members of the House Rules Committee beside Chairman O'Connor, Representatives Martin Dies, of Texas, and Lawrence Lewis, Colorado, both Democrats. Pressure on the Rules Committee, which held the wage-hour bill up for many months, is essential in order to get the bill right-of-way to the floor.

Lewis went to the Capitol after the House Judiciary Committee, under the leadership of shrewd old Hatton Sumners, Democrat, Texas, the chairman, had voted 12-11, against substituting for its own measure the bill which has already passed the Senate. This procedural setback meant that the House measure would have to go through the conservatives-dominated Rules Committee. Substitution of the Senate bill would have allowed direct action on the House floor.

The amendments to the Walsh-Healey act, which now requires companies holding Government contracts in excess of $10,000 to conform to prescribed wage-hour standards, would drop that limit to $2,900, vastly increasing the load on the already-overworked Labor Relations Board.

Lewis said:

"I want the bill with a vengeance. Companies which fatten on Government contracts ought to obey the law.

"Take the aircraft industry for example. It is making a new set of millionaires in this country. They're fattening off the agony of the world. There is no reason why they shouldn't be law-abiding in the United States."

Naming Douglas Aircraft as a violator, Lewis avoided noting that Ford Motor Co., Republic Steel Co. and others which have fought off C. I. O.'s unionization, would be affected by the bill.

The C. I. O. aides, after the conference, spent several hours in the House lobby buttonholing Congressmen.

The rules committee will meet again this morning. No action was taken at their session yesterday afternoon.

However, a parliamentary effort in the House Judiciary Committee to expedite action on the bill failed by a vote of 12 to 11.

Representative Lewis (Democrat), of Colorado, a member of the Rules Committee, who was summoned to the conference, said later:

"I was very glad to meet Mr. Lewis. But, boys, nobody puts the heat on me. Whatever I do, I do on my own."

Some of the bill's backers were gloomy last night. One said, "You can bet 5 to 1 right now that the bill won't pass at this session. If you find anyone who will take the bet, cut me in on it, will you?"

3d Offender Given 30 Days for Speed

One of the few straight jail sentences ever imposed in District Police Court for speeding was imposed yesterday on William Fanning, 19 of 1356 Spring road northwest. The youth will serve 30 days for his third speed offense since March.

490 Graduates Of Georgetown Hear Tumulty

Wilson's Aide Avers Work and Faith Only Can Solve Troubles.

The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, president of Georgetown University, yesterday conferred degrees upon 490 persons, including the honorary doctorate of science given Dr. Joseph Stiles Wall of the Medical School, in open-air ceremonies at the university.

Father O'Leary urged alumni provide financial support to help expand university activities and provide new buildings, among them a recreation center, science building, and a new hospital.

He praised the co-operation of undergraduates and faculty as the means of "sending forth into our country, good men and learned men, who will take their place among the leaders of the nation."

"I wish you every success, real, true, lasting success," he told the graduating classes.

Georgetown Graduate.

Following his address, he gave the honorary degree of doctor of science to Dr. Hall, chairman of the department of pediatrics, in recognition of his 40 years' service as a member of the medical school faculty. A native of Washington, Dr. Hall graduated from Georgetown Medical School and joined the faculty soon afterward. He is past president of the American Child Health Association and a member of the District and American Medical associations.

Candidates for degrees were introduced by deans of their colleges, and, as degrees were conferred, each group faced the audience and put on their hoods.

The commencement speaker, Joseph P. Tumulty, former secretary to the late President Woodrow Wilson, warned the graduates "there is no new modernistic way out of our distress."

He declared the only way out is "harder work and greater faith."

Tumulty declared communism, fascism or naziism were no substitutes for "the American system which gives free sway to the soul of a man."

"Before you declare in terms of dogmatic opinion how the problems of the world are to be solved, I would earnestly suggest from my own experience that you live long enough with the world and with human beings to understand the difference between change and progress."

Those who received diplomas yesterday were:

President Roosevelt signed yesterday a bill authorizing the Federal District Court for eastern Virginia to hold sessions at Newport News, beginning the first Monday in February and the second Monday in July. The court now sits at Norfolk, Richmond and Alexandria.

Judge Strider's Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

Former Municipal Judge Knew Lincoln, Lee and Buffalo Bill.

Funeral services for Luke C. Strider, who knew Lincoln, Lee and Buffalo Bill Cody, will be conducted at 11 a. m. tomorrow at his late residence, 1450 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Mr. Strider, a former judge of the Municipal Court and a District resident for 60 years, died Saturday at his home after an illness of several weeks. He would have been 89 Thursday.

A native of Jefferson County, Va., now West Virginia, Judge Strider, as a boy of 10, saw John Brown hanged in Charles Town.

After the family moved to Washington in 1853, he attended Kelly's Select School for Boys, on a site where the Congregational Church now stands at Tenth and G streets northwest. He was one of a squad of small-boy soldiers, including President Lincoln's son, "Tad," who played at military drill in the days immediately before the Civil War.

At the outbreak of war, the Strider family returned to Jefferson County and his father and older brother joined the Confederate forces. It was after the war at Washington College, Lexington, Va., that Judge Strider came to know Gen. Robert E. Lee, then president of the institution.

He is survived by a daughter, Miss Emma T. Strider, of Washington; a brother, De Witt C. Strider, of Charles Town, and two sisters, Mrs. Adalbert Robinson and Mrs. C. Coder, both of Marysville, Ohio.

Funeral services will be conducted by a cousin, Robert E. Lee Strider, Bishop Coadjutor of West Virginia. Honorary pallbearers will be Henry P. Blair, Allen C. Clark, Appleton Clark, jr., Gilbert A. Clark, Clyde D. Garrett, Lauriston H. Hannah, J. Leo Kolb, Maurice D. Rosenberg, Joseph Sanders and Henry A. Willard, 2d.

The Loose Ends.

Even more disturbing than the monetary cost of the new spending program is the impression, created by the course of this bill through Congress, that all restraints upon governmental extravagance have broken down. One estimate places the total appropriations of the current session at approximately $12,000,000,000. Yet miscellaneous items were injected into the spending bill with a recklessness suggesting no concern for either taxpayers or for the Government's credit.

Especially indicative of this mood are the legislative items written into the bill by the Senate. There is no generic relationship between the relief bill and parity payments for farmers. But the Senate included in its measure $212,000,000 to reward farmers for co-operation with the AAA in the curtailment of crops. Fortunately this item must be submitted to a separate vote in the House. It should promptly throw out this rider.

One other major change that has no place in the relief bill is the proposed amendment to the Housing Authority Act. The Conference Committee accepted the Senate's proposal adding $300,000,000 to the funds USHA may borrow and spend. This section was substantially improved, however, by elimination of the proposal that local communities be temporarily relieved of contributing to the initial cost of slum clearance projects.

Any change in the housing program ought to be carefully considered on its own merits. There can be only one excuse for attaching such legislative amendments to the relief appropriations bill, and that is the rush of Congress toward adjournment. In order to cut the session short the Senate dumped all last-minute spending plans into a single omnibus bill and gave them a blanket indorsement.

Public reaction toward this spending spree has been decidedly unfavorable. Aside from the essential relief items, the only excuse for this outpouring of funds is the hope that it may stimulate greater business activity. It has been evident for weeks that the bill would pass. Yet many business barometers are lower than they were when the spending program was announced.

Flexible Retirement.

Bills to liberalize the civil service retirement law have been before Congress for a long time. It is regrettable that the pressure of emergency measures has prevented Congress from giving them the consideration they merit. Certainly, however, that neglect could not be properly overcome by sudden enactment of the Neely bill during the pre-adjournment rush.

So far as it goes, the Neely bill has a number of constructive features. It aims to make the retirement provisions of the civil service system more flexible. There seems general agreement that the compulsory retirement of different groups of employes at 62, 65 and 70 years of age, after 15 years of service, is entirely too rigid an arrangement. These requirements of the present law would be modified by the Neely bill so that employes would also have the option of retirement at 58, 60 and 64, after 30 years of service.

Flexibility at the other end of the retirement age scale would be obtained by permitting the Civil Service Commission to grant as many as three one-year extensions beyond the ages now fixed for termination of service. And the President could permit still further extensions if the interests of the Government should require continued service of any employe.

As the bill stands, however, this greater flexibility would operate to the benefit of the employes alone. The Civil Service Commission has repeatedly pointed out that the Government also should have an option to retire employes at 60 years, with 30 years of service, if their health and efficiency have become impaired. As a safeguard against abuse of that privilege employes would be given the right to appeal any grievance to the Civil Service Commission.

Under the commission's plan, moreover, retirement would become optional for all groups at 60 and compulsory at 70. That should leave ample room within each group for retirement of the unfit and continuation of those still able to render unimpaired service. While it would cost the Government more in pensions, the amount might easily be saved in improved efficiency.

Little consideration appears to have been given the advice of the Civil Service Commission by the Senate. It is hoped that the emergency session to be held by the House Civil Service Committee today does not foreshadow similar action. Since the committee does not have time to draft a well-rounded bill to improve the service, as well as grant new benefits to Government workers, it may well delay the matter until a more propitious time.

The White Collar Worker.

An aspect of the pending wage-hour legislation which has received singularly little advance consideration is its probable effect on clerical workers. The lack of attention given this issue is no measure, unfortunately, of its actual importance.

In most industrial and commercial establishments stenographers, typists, file clerks and the like are employed on the basis of an annual salary and are paid weekly wages. They receive, customarily, two weeks' vacation with pay and are very seldom penalized for a reasonable amount of sick leave or other absence due to legitimate cause.

To offset these considerations the so-called white-collar worker is expected to work overtime during rush periods. When an annual report is in preparation, or at other times of unusual pressure, a 60-hour working week will temporarily replace the normal office routine.

Even with the improvements made, the wage-hour bill seems to pay inadequate attention to this situation. In the case of clerical workers, as well as that of factory hands, wages at 50 per cent above the regular rate will apply at the outset for a work-week longer than 44 hours. After two years, time and one-half must be paid for overtime in excess of 40 hours per week.

It is pointed out that the inevitable tendency of this rigid provision will be to shift the white-collar worker from a weekly to an hourly remuneration basis. If the employer has to pay overtime during rush periods he will be inclined to expect full service in slack seasons. And such full service can best be exacted on a time-clock basis, with wages adjusted to hours actually worked. This, of course, would make provisions for vacation or sick-leave pay more difficult.

Perhaps mistakenly, the white-collar worker has been prone to consider his position preferable to that of the artisan. If the hourly wage of the former is lower, that is offset by the more comfortable and stable conditions of clerical employment. For that reason clerical employes have been slow to organize in trade unions. They have generally argued that paid vacations, sick leave and continuous employment in slack seasons together outweigh the seeming advantage of high hourly wage rates, even when fortified by bonus pay for overtime.

Under the bill as it now stands no emergency overtime need be paid if collective bargaining has brought an agreement for a working year of 2,000 hours or less. But to protect their employment on an annual basis in this manner clerical employes must immediately proceed to form trade unions. And there is not at present much evidence of a disposition to do so on their part.

With white-collar unions, moreover, the same pressure to engage clerical workers on hourly rates would operate with many employers. When guarantees are imposed it is natural to abandon those which have been voluntarily given. This aspect of the bill now on the verge of enactment has received little thought. But there is reason to suppose that protection given by law is likely to be counteracted by withdrawals of privileges heretofore freely accorded.

It will be difficult, in short, for clerical employes both to eat their cake in the form of bonus payments for overtime, and to have it in the shape of wages for periods when they are not actually at work.

Planning For Traffic.

Three District officials deeply concerned with the growing problem of automobile traffic in the Capital have been studying the most highly developed traffic control system in the country. Commissioner Hazen, Traffic Director Van Duzer and Highway Director Whitehurst have returned from New York, where they inspected the new web of highways which carries the swarms of cars daily traveling between the metropolis and outlying Westchester, Long Island, New Jersey and beyond. They are agreed that Washington must resort to some similar engineering formula for an effective solution of its traffic problem.

This is by no means a new thought at the District Building. Indeed, the city is already prepared to embark on a highway improvement program which, when realized, will have cost some $20,000,000. Devised under the direction of Capt. Whitehurst, it envisages five years of work to adapt for fast-moving automobiles the horse-and-carriage street system conceived by L'Enfant. For the first year, 1938-39, Congress has approved the expenditure of $4,600,000 which, among other improvements, will permit the construction of an underpass at Thomas Circle and the elimination of the intersection of K street with the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway.

This will be only a beginning, of course. Grade separation structures in Rock Creek Park, a bridge to avoid the increasing congestion at Fourteenth and Water streets, the development of West Virginia avenue as a major artery—these and other plans are being drawn, to say nothing of preliminary discussion of a new bridge across the Potomac to connect with a by-pass around the city. Funds running well into the millions will be needed before these improvements materialize. Fortunately, Congress has been sympathetic in granting the first installment. Further co-operation is best insured by just such initiative as the traffic officials have shown in their trip to New York.

Kentucky Traveler.

Hi ho, hi ho, to Louisville we go . . . Wish it was the Derby, though, instead of this dratted WPA investigation . . . Well, anyway, this berth's not over the wheels so maybe I'll get a little sleep . . . But why'd they have to pick on me for this job? . . . Shucks, any fool of a clerk could have done it . . . all you have to do is breeze around to the WPA office . . . "Any politics being played in your outfit, suh?" . . . That ought to be good for a laugh . . . then I'll chew the rag a bit and maybe after lunch shoot a couple of holes of golf . . .

Biddly-up, biddly-up, biddly-up . . . hoo, hoo, hoo, hoo!

What the heck, whyn't they just give someone the gong the way they did with old Christgau out in Minnesota the other day? . . . that's the way to handle these boys who get too nosey with the WPA . . . Boot 'em out, 'swhat I say . . . only way to shut 'em up . . . let 'em rave and first thing you know we'll have that Congressional committee to hear all complaints about poll-priming . . . then where'd we be, I ask you? . . . down with McGinty, that's where . . . Wonder what my chances are of being made a Kentucky colonel for this job? . . .

Biddly-up, biddly-up, biddly-up . . . whssssssh, bam!

After all, no matter who wins the primary, the President will ask 'em over to the White House for some cold roast beef and everything'll be hunky-dory . . . Then why do they want me to traipse all the way down to Louisville to make an "investigation?" . . . Well, I should worry, I'm not footing the bill . . . Let's see, how'll I word my report? . . . Something like: "I am convinced after investigation that the State and district administrative officials of the WPA in Kentucky have repeatedly made it clear to WPA workers that their jobs in no way depend upon who (or should it be 'whom?') they vote for in any primary or election" . . . zzzzzz . . . zzzzzz . . . zum . . .

Unconquered Everest.

Like the proverbial Yankee, Tibetans are said to answer a question with a question. When asked concerning man's prospects of ever conquering their Everest, they counter with: "How can the little comprehend the great?"

In view of current news from Darjeeling, it is a fair reply. The seventh attempt to scale the highest peak in the world has been abandoned. Everest can be assailed only during certain seasons of the year, when the weather is still cold enough to prevent avalanches yet not too severe for human hearts. This year the warming monsoon came early. The seven climbers, five of whom have challenged the mountain before, were forced to turn back while still low on the North Col, the knife-edge approach to Everest.

Some conception of the mountain's magnitude is gained from the fact that the foot of the col—the foot—is higher than the summit of Mount McKinley, the highest peak in North America. Notwithstanding, it has been traversed several times, though rarely without tragedy intervening. On one occasion, seven porters were swept from it to oblivion. On another, four were inadvertently left behind during a descent and spent two days marooned in a blizzard before a daring rescue. And in 1924, Mallory and Irvin vanished in its mists as they fought through to within a few hundred feet of their 29,002-foot goal.

That last two feet—unappreciated by Sir George Everest, who roughly calculated the height in 1841—is one of the most discouraging aspects of the mountain, at least to a mind accustomed to no more than St. Alban altitudes. They denote a planned inaccessibility about Everest. Those two gratuitous feet were most certainly added as a taunt.

In St. Marys County.

When the days begin to warm up modest St. Marys County willy nilly breaks into the news.

It doesn't get into the major headlines. That requires a broken heart, a broken contract, a broken commandment or some other bad break sufficiently wicked or regrettable. But (Virtue contenting herself with quieter trappings) the county knows joyous little one and two line heads, together with lyrical tributes from our own Bill Ackerman.

Thus a fortunate world is apprised of the fact that the hardheads are numerous off Cedar Point; that the rockfish are schooling, so to speak (one fisherman in the St. Marys River saw a hundred graduate into his boat!); and the bluefish with silver spoons in their mouths are already chasing the trollers.

And you may have bacon with your fried fish. A farmer near Oakville reports that a sow belonging to him has given birth to nineteen pigs.

Moreover cherries are ripe.

In the circumstances there is justification for the song the school children sing, concluding with a reference to:

Beef About Beavers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by the morning paper that Mr. Ickes' department is planning to move a lot of beavers to Wyoming and Idaho.

As the owner of a Wyoming ranch, I desire to register a protest against this new program of transplanting beavers from places where they are doing good work to places where the New Dealers think they would like to have them work.

There are plenty of beavers in Idaho and Wyoming and they are working in well-selected places. What is going to become of the streams and conservation projects from which these beavers are to be lifted? Probably the first result will be to have the whole debeavered territory swept by floods and after the floods have washed away all the trees on the hills adjoining these valleys, then no doubt dust storms will follow.

The beavers know their business better than the New Dealers, and they have a very much higher reputation. I strongly urge that they (the beavers) be allowed to do their own work in their own way, without the help of the intellectuals whose superiors the beavers have proven themselves to be.

WYOMING RANCHERO.
Washington, June 13.

P. S.—When a beaver wants to go fishing he doesn't waste much time about it. He just dives in and gets one and he dosen't take Jackson and Ickes along to cook up speeches either.

McCall And Raskolnikov.

To the Editor of The Post Sir: Permit me to express my opinion of the uproar of the Nation against the tragic kidnaping and murder in Florida.

Multitudes of people are now occupied judging McCall and sympathizing with the mother and father of the little Cash boy. Neither of these sentiments reaches to the cause of these occurrences.

The case reminds me of the book "Crime and Punishment," by Fyodor Dostoevsky. The same reason that prompted Raskolnikov to commit crime also appears to have prompted McCall, namely, economic pressure, religous maladjustment, and intellectual disorder. Such men as these so-called criminals could have been assets to society under a proper economic, religious and social system.

Would it not tbe better if leaders of institutions and preachers of gospels would get together and pray as they have never prayed before for proper guidance and for knowledge in establishing a new world order based on love and proper justice by which greater tragedies could be checked? God's Way.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Who shall judge this generation and by what judgment shall they be judged?"

For over five years we have suffered the evils of depression and recession. And we are still getting deeper into the woods. This summer's primaries are a disgrace to any nation. We have tried the ways of man—now, let's try God's way.

In one of our President's fireside talks he told of the progress which was being made and exultantly stated as the reason for this progress the fact that "we planned it that way." If he had humbly told the people that with the help of God some progress had been made and urged them to remember that only with the help of God this progress would continue, the depression would soon have been over and there would have been no recession. "For when a man thinketh he is something when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself."

Let's profit by our mistakes. Discontinue our bickering and slander. Let's pray to God, and talk to God. We will regain our confidence, we will see our neighbor's viewpoint, and gradually work out our problems. WILMER F. SHRYOCK.

Arch McDonald Fans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Friends and myself have discussed (and cussed) the letters which have attempted to criticize the baseball game broadcasts of Arch McDonald, and the undersigned has been appointed a committee of one to write you and tell you we are for Arch 100 per cent.

Baseball is, we have reason to believe, an American game, and Americans like those whom this letter represents are able to understand Arch's broadcasts without an interpreter, even though he lacks a Harvard or "British" accent.

His between-play patter is clever and witty and his entire broadcast is enjoyable to anyone understanding the game. The critics, we firmly believe, are all tiddle-de-wink players.

A baseball broadcast without McDonald's patter would be the same as a single drawing of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" compared to Disney's animated sound picture.

So please tell Arch to keep "the ducks on the pond," "he went away" and "allah-ga-zam," to the accompaniment of "The Old Pine Tree," on the afternoon breeze.

Pork In The Memorial?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Heartiest thanks and all honor to those patriotic Senators (as well as to the newspapers of Washington) who are fighting to defeat the scheme to destroy the present perfect beauty of the Tidal Basin in the name of a memorial to Thomas Jefferson.

Popular as well as professional denunciation of the present plan has been virtually unanimous. Nevertheless its small group of sponsors with a persistence worthy of a better cause have shown an implacable determination to "muscle" it through.

Why? Can there be any except one correct answer? That is, pork—and unlimited gravy.

Engineers have testified to strike bottom anywhere in the Tidal Basin area will require from 90 to 110-foot foundations. In other words it provides the biggest available sink hole to fill up with concrete and cement and the $3,000,000 already contemplated for the project will be literally only a drop in the bucket.

Allow me to offer a suggestion in all seriousness. If it is absolutely necessary for the sponsors of this grandiose scheme for their own purposes to "deliver" to the above extent they will honor Thomas Jefferson more, dishonor themselves less and spare the city of Washington a white elephant and permanent eyesore if they take first $500,000 then $3,000,000 then increasing amounts from the Public Treasury, spend it for concrete and cement, load this on scows and take it out and dump it in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean.

J. J. ARMSTRONG.

"Dangerous Day."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Black Plague of Censorship has spread over a good part of the world. Practically all Europe and Asia is in the grip of absolute censorship. Great Britain and America are seriously threatened. Government control over radio broadcasting has already shown the work of dictators.

A good half of the world is now receiving information which is biased and distorted to serve the purposes of government. Newspapers in many lands are valueless as a means of enabling people to acquire a true picture of world happenings. Events of history-making propositions are ignored entirely, suppressed, if they do not show a country's political leaders in a favorable light.

It is a dangerous day.

R. I. GODWIN.

Dictator Talk.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Strange as it may seem, it was the financial barons who suggested that President Roosevelt put on the robe of a dictator. The President refused. Now these same barons of finance are up to their old tricks again and are endeavoring to make the people believe the President desires to become a dictator.

The American people will not be fooled by the nonsensical dictator talk, nor will the President be deterred in his purpose to carry out the will of the American people.

Public Money And Votes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the blackest pages in American history was recently written when the Senate sanctioned the use of taxpayers' money for political and partisan purposes.

The result in Iowa was encouraging to decent-minded American people and proves that voters can't always be bought.

It would seem that democracy is deteriorating rapidly when self-seeking politicians endeavor to buy the vote with the public money and intimidate people at the polls.

Hague And The Gitlow Decision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Maybe you are not trying to protect and defend Communists in the fight Mayor Hague is having against them in Jersey City. But your editorials in your issue of June 12 and earlier certainly do not agree with the United States Supreme Court.

A similarly strange array of persistent Communist defenders stood behind one Benjamin Gitlow who was convicted in New York about 1922 of violation of the criminal anarchy statute of New York. This statute made it a felony to make any declaration, oral or written "advocating, advising or teaching the doctrine that organized government should be overthrown."

The Supreme Court of the United States rejected and condemned the outrageous contention advanced on the behalf of Gitlow that he was within his constitutional rights in publishing the Revolutionary Age, a paper containing matter advocating, advising and teaching the pernicious doctrines prohibited by said statute of New York.

In the course of its opinion in that case, Gitlow vs. New York, 268 U. S. 652, 669, the Supreme Court said: "A State in the exercise of its police power may punish those who abuse this freedom (of speech) by utterances (a) inimical to the public welfare, (b) tending to corrupt public morals, (c) incite to crime, or (d) disturb public peace, is not open to question, and, for yet more imperative reasons, a State may punish utterances (e) endangering the foundation of organized government."

The court also said, "It (the State) cannot reasonably be required to defer the adoption of measures for its own peace and safety until the revolutionary utterances lead to actual disturbances of the public peace or imminent and immediate danger of its own destruction; but it may in the exercise of its judgment, suppress the threatened danger in its incipiency."

The unquestionable soundness of this decision of the Supreme Court is obvious to every right-thinking American citizen, and recent world events have shown that any other decision would have been suicidal. We are reminded of the profound wisdom of Byron's: "A thousand years scarce serve to form a state, an hour may lay it in the dust."

Wherever democratic governments have tolerated the advocacy or teaching of any doctrine for the overthrow of the Government, they have thereby supplied the very channels for their own destruction.

The Post Impressionist

The Nomad.

THEY moved a house on Ellicott steet yesterday—that is, they moved it from Wisconsin avenue down to Ellicott street.

It's really been on its journey three days, down Fessenden, down Forty-third, and now down Ellicott. Our entire neighborhood is pretty upset about it. People have come from the remotest corners of Friendship Heights to see it; there was even a contingent from Chevy Chase. Bucky has been so absorbed by it that he hasn't found the time to throw a single stone at Cheepie, Cheepie has ceased pulling Angelica's hair, Angelica's stopped strangling The Pup, and The Pup has left off chasing The Cat. Pretty significant, I think, of the momentous nature of the occurrence.

Of course, we're used to movement and I even think we're too used to it. I think, for instance, if Walt Whitman were here to feel the pulse of the Nation again, he would emerge from contemplation with one of those itemized accounts that some people seem to think the equivalent of poems, something about I see America on the jump, I see the people of America rolling down the road in shiny cans of tin, I see the Nation's life rolling down the road. The soil of America cannot hold the American people and even the dainty violet has left its nursery home in Rochester to come smirk with small knowing air in my front yard. The people of America have shaken the soil of America off their shoes; and so forth, in that rather odiously pedantic style which I'm told on all sides to consider terrific.

It's a pretty formidable sight to see, a house squatting in the middle of your street—a restless and, as it were, homeless house, squatting for a moment like a gigantic form of that insect tribe that makes its way by spurts after long deliberative pauses. It's as the French say, hors nature, for a house to go on like that; 'taint natural, as we say in English; the baby spanks the nurse and athwart goes all decorum, as the Elizabethans would say. There's something positively indecent about seeing a staid old house go truckin' down the road. It make you want to say, what's the world coming to?

You might think that the trailer would have accustomed us to the sight of houses moving down the street. You can drive to Baltimore and get the impression that there's nothing but houses on the move. My neighbor on the left suggested that I just hitch my car up to that thing and I could go to Maine for the summer. But all that rests on a specious fallacy: A trailer and a house aren't the same thing, at least not to my way of thinking.

A house is man's attempt at permanence. Man may move, but a house is symbolic of firmness and stability. You don't think of it as feeling the urge of spring and the call of far places. It sits in its yard and says with unalterable conviction, "Here I bide." That's almost what houses are for.

I think we in America have pushed this business of being on the move almost beyond the reasonable point. I realize that right now Mongolians are moving to the other side of Inner Mongolia and I know the Tuaregs are going to pitch camp in a new corner of North Africa tonight because I've seen them at it. I'm not one to rise up and tell nomadic tribes to stop being nomadic, nor am I going to tell Li'l Edith from Gastonia, N. C., to go back to the native village or at least stay put in the Quelquechose Apartments because she won't be any happier in the Whatsis. I think her soul will arrive at new glories if she does move.

I think a certain amount of the nomad is inherent in human nature. I think a new locale once in a while is good for people, at least when they're young like Li'l Edith. I think if you keep people in one place all the time, like in the Middle Ages, they'll eventually pack up and go them on one glorious crusade. Myself, I piously hope I'll never move again, but under the present Administration, I certainly manage without much difficulty to feel on the move, unrooted.

I think perhaps something terrible happened to that house. Maybe its master died, or it fell in love with another house, but that house married a cunning California bungalow. Of course, strictly speaking, I know such fancies are foolish and have no sense to them. I don't know what happened to the house, I have no idea why it has left Wisconsin avenue to settle on Ellicott street. All I know is it's upset everything dreadfully and I hope the poor old thing can stay put now.

Robert Long Shows How

The story of Robert Long, who worked his way through the Chicago Art Institute as janitor and has now been awarded a fellowship to study abroad, has the flavor of genius in the old tradition. The fires burned within him and would not be quenched. Hardship and menial toil seem only to have added to his determination to succeeed.

Good luck, Robert Long! You have shown qualities which today are far too rare. Whether or not your paintings ever become collectors' items, you have made a worthwhile contribution. Your case should be food for thought by that congressional committee pondering the Pepper-Coffee bill—a measure which takes the view that artists must be subsidized to survive in modern society.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Hague Unrebuked.

IT SEEMS FUTILE to look to the National Administration for any rebuke to Frank Hague in Jersey City on Principle. A rebuke for practical, political reasons would be another matter and would count for nothing as a defense of civil liberties.

PEGLER.

In a similar but more brutal and dangerous situation in Louisiana the Administration fought Huey Long, but not on any question of principle. Huey broke discipline and therefore attempts were made to punish him through his organization, but there was no solicitude for the liberties and rights of the citizens who lived under his system of persecution. In fact, since his death his successors have continued to operate the Long system, which inclines strongly to extortion, but are accepted as New Dealers in good standing by reason of the reconciliation which is known in Washington as the Second Louisiana Purchase. But the old Long machine has not changed. It has only made a deal.

* * * *

ON PRECEDENT, then, Hague appears to be safe as long as he plays ball. Of course, if some political break should occur, then, naturally, he would be placed in the doghouse. Wishful interpreters might try to construe that as an act of principle, as a repudiation of a man who had the effrontery to turn out the National Guard under arms by way of reminder that in case of a showdown he might sweep the streets with machine guns. But that would not be true. Huey passed laws which converted the Louisiana National Guard into a personal army and called out troops repeatedly to intimidate the citizens while he put through a series of laws which gave him control of the courts, the elections, the local governments and the schools and established a secret police force comparable to Hitler's.

And, anyway, a rebuke to Hague pretending to be based on principle would be inconsistent with the spirit of the New Deal. If the dispatches of Tom Stokes, Kentucky, are true—and you may be sure he can prove up—then it is no more wise for a WPA worker to express opposition to Dear Alben Barkley, in Kentucky, than for a radical agitator to sound off in Frank Hague's Journal Square. He might not be run out of town, but if he were given to understand that rash speech would cost him his job, how free would he be to speak his mind?

We have seen also the work of the Senate Lobby Committee "investigating" people who exercised the right to petition Congress to reject the reorganization bill. This committee has not "investigated" any of those who lobbied for the bill—only those who lobbied against it, although a Washington dispatch that day said that messengers claiming to have White House authority interviewed Senators, making promises and threats. These were not the precise words, but they give the meaning. The 96 Senators themselves, if placed under oath as witnesses, should be able to tell who the messengers were, claiming White House authority, and exactly what they said. The messengers then could be examined, too. But no Senators have been called nor any messengers who claimed White House authority. The committee isn't interested in that phase.

* * * *

SO THE SPIRIT of the New Deal, in these and other incidents, will be seen to be not unlike that of Mr. Hague around the edges. Not yet as crude and rough, to be sure, but similar in principle and capable of development.

Now that Hague, so close to New York and the news spotlight which glares more brightly here than in Louisiana, has demonstrated the danger of political terrorism, perhaps he will give pause to those New Dealers who thought they were sick and tired of fair play.

It all recalls a popular story of the time when American soldiers and British were quarreling over the question, "Who won the war?" The story went that a crowd gathered around a street fight and a Cockney on the outskirts yelled: "Oo's down now?"

"One of our chaps," said a voice and the Cockney yelled: "Stand back! Fair play! Give the lad a chance."

A moment later he asked: "And oo's down now?"

"Bloody Yank," was the answer, and the Cockney cried, "Boot the bloody ——."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Something Wrong Somewhere.

Caesar Gerard, a Newark mechanic, who came to this country as a boy, left his life savings of $15,000 to Uncle Sam. "I made my money in this country and I want to leave it to a country that was good to me," he said.

"He's just bugs," declared the Modern American Who Thinks His Country Owes Him Everything when told of this today. "Imagine a guy thinking he owes his country something!"

* * * *

The M. W. T. H. C. O. H. E. also seemed to think the fact that the mechanic had managed to save $15,000 opened him to censure.

* * * *

"Fifteen thousand smackers!" he exclaimed. "Why, what kind of an American can a man be who is thrifty enough to save that much dough?"

* * * *

The Man Who Thinks His Country Owes Him Everything was pretty indignant. "I thought it was pretty well understood by this time," he sneered, "that a feller who has put away some money is no good," he said. "In considering the fact that he left it to his country you gotta remember that the mere possession of 15,000 bucks opens him to suspicion.

* * * *

"To save that much money a man has got to live carefully, watch his expenses, and not get into debt over his head, and we can't encourage a thing like that, can we?

* * * *

"He either got his money by hard work and thrift or else he was a Waterbury politician. In either case he had dough in the bank, and that is almost against the law in this country today.

* * * *

"But even if I give him the benefit of the doubt and assume he managed to save $15,000 without being either thrifty or a crook, what can be said for an American who openly admits he has thrived under the old-fashioned American system, found it okay and wants to show some real gratitude?

* * * *

"Everybody knows you don't owe America a thing today. America is a failure. It is a land where it is impossible to make a living. It is a land where a feller is lucky if he can make both ends meet. Where does that Newark man get that stuff about this being a pretty fair country which has been pretty good to him?"

* * * *

The Man Who Thinks His Country Owes Him Everything was pretty furious. "He musta been screwy," he concluded. "Plain screwy."

Reason and Realism Demanded To Insure Correct Diagnosis Of World's Current Illnesses, Noted Commentator Declares.

Following are the remarks of the publisher of The Post and Miss Dorothy Thompson as broadcast over Station WRC last night. Miss Thompson, outstanding columnist and correspondent, will write regularly for The Post beginning in September.

MR. EUGENE MEYER: Welcome to The Post, Miss Thompson. I am sure I speak for our readers as well as for every member of our staff when I tell you how pleased we are that you are to become part of The Post on your return from your vacation in September. Please tell us your guiding ideas for the conduct of your column.

THOMPSON.

MISS DOROTHY THOMPSON: I have always thought that the best rule for a columnist was laid down by Mr. Justice Holmes as the guiding idea to govern members of the Supreme Court. Mr. Justice Holmes said: "I am always reminding myself every day that I am not God." I suppose that if columnists thought that what they say was going to be the last word on any subject, they would all turn dumb, because we all talk about a great many events that, in the nature of things, we have only limited knowledge about. The business of a columnist is to throw as much light as possible on day-to-day happenings, with a view to stimulating interest and awakening discussion. If the time ever comes when I don't get a lot of letters telling me I am all wet, I will think the time has come for me to stop writing a column.

MR. MEYER: But I suppose, Miss Thompson, you do write from a point of view.

MISS THOMPSON: Of course! It's impossible to write without a point of view if one writes sincerely. I must say, my point of view changes from time to time as I become, I hope, less ignorant, but I think it's fairly consistent.

MR. MEYER: Would you mind outlining your point of view?

MISS THOMPSON: That's hard to do in a minute, Mr. Meyer. But first of all, I am very aware of the kind of world we live in. I ought to be aware of it, I have lived in the midst of it very vividly for the last 15 years. I have seen revolution after revolution. I have seen all the Utopias. I know that there are going to be changes and adjustments. They are going on. They are necessary. But what perturbs me and the thing that I constantly fight against is the flight away from reasonability. The fact that more and more people are asked by their leaders to accept things on say-so; to accept interpretations of the causes of our distress without any objective analysis as to whether these statements are true or untrue, and whether they will stand the light of reason.

MR. MEYER: And you are trying to do what you can to throw this light of reason?

MISS THOMPSON: Yes, and not only reason but realism. You see whether or not you find the right cure for what is wrong with the social order depends on whether or not you find the right diagnosis, as well as the right treatment. I am strongly of the opinion that in the last few years the diagnosis of our ills has been wrong time and time again, and then if the diagnois is full of mistakes, with the best will in the world, you are not going to cure the patient. The business of intelligent people is to find what these mistakes are regardless of whether your opinion is going to put you on what-is-called the right or what-is-called the left.

If, for instance, the present business recession is due to underinvestment, you need a different cure for it than if it's due to underconsumption. And the business of an intelligent person is to find out what it is due to.

MR. MEYER: Exactly where do you stand, Miss Thompson, on the left or on the right?

MISS THOMPSON: Mr. Meyer, I don't know what these words mean any longer. I find the left advocating policies which seem to me grossly reactionary such as the idea that there is an over-production of wealth in this country. I find the right blindly closing its eyes to the fact that we live in a revolutionary world and that working people have a right to demand certain things, and that their demands should be met. But I don't think any of our problems can be solved by slogans. They have to be approached with a spirit of inquiry, good will, and real intelligence.

MR. MEYER: And that is what you are trying to do in your column, Miss Thompson?

MISS THOMPSON: Yes, and I only regret that I am not better equipped.

MR. MEYER: I hope you will enjoy your vacation, Miss Thompson, and we will be waiting for you in The Post in September.

2 SEC Members Ask Dismissal of $1,000,000 Suit

Two of four defendants in a $1,000,000 "malicious prosecution" suit by J. Edward Jones, New York oil promoter, George C. Matthews and Robert E. Healy, members of the Securities and Exchange Commission, yesterday asked District Court to dismiss the suit because no cause of action was cited by Jones in his complaint.

Matthews and Healy claim they were public officers at the time of the action, and were thus not liable for their administrative activities, regardless of motives.

Other defendants are Joseph P. Kennedy, now Ambassador to England, and James M. Landis, of the Harvard Law School, both former members of the SEC.

Jones charges an action of the Securities and Exchange Commission, in connection with stock transactions, damaged his business. He was dealing in oil securities.

Rejection Slips

By Isabel Patterson.

"It's Too Good For Them."

HERE IS A statement that makes us blink . . . It's from Frank Jenkins, calling attention to "Death Is So Fair," a novel of the Irish Rebellion . . . Says Mr. Jenkins: Rejection slips from publishers have caused many ambitious authors to doubt their ability to write their first novels."

PATTERSON.

The man is obviously employed in a publisher's office . . . So that's what he thinks . . . We hesitate to shatter his illusion about the effect of his rejection slips; he may feel frustrated or he may set to work vainly trying to devise a rejection slip that will do the trick . . . But it's no use.

The fact is that an ambitious author, on receiving a rejection slip for his first novel, doubts everything but the one point mentioned above . . . He doubts if it would be possible, by a rigorous application of intelligence tests and taking the lowest I. Q. out of the entire population of the country, to find any other person so utterly and congenitally unfitted to hold a position in the publishing world, as the blatant dimwit who has thus egregiously failed to perceive the advent of genius . . . He doubts if there is any public intrinsically worthy of the privilege of reading his works, including those unwritten; but he hopes that posterity may be a little better, and in the meantime, he'll show them anyhow.

He doubts if the rejector read the offering at all; since in addition to its literary virtues, it possesses, in his opinion, all the earmarks of a best seller, in far greater degree than whatever is selling a million copies at the moment . . . He doubts that the editor is authentic; probably the rejection is the work of the janitor . . . He doubts the survival of literature against the stone wall of such invincible ignorance, prejudice and crass stupidity . . . He doubts the future of the human race as such, since it can produce such specimens . . . But he never, never doubts that the only handicap inherent in his work is its superior merit . . . It's too good for them, that's what's the matter.

This holds true equally of second, third, tenth and twentieth novels, should they fail to climb to the top of the best-seller list . . . In this unshakable conviction, the author may even go so far as to turn against some previous success and dismiss it contemptuously as a mere potboiler, flung to the public in a mood of contempt and thereby proving the public is always wrong, both ways.

Fascists Seeking An Excuse to Aid Franco Openly

By James M. Minifie.

Rome.

Fascist leaders would welcome the excuse for further overt intervention in Spain, as the Spanish Republicans obstinately refuse to subscribe to Premier Benito Mussolini's view that the only acceptable settlement is an outright Franco victory.

This is becoming apparent from the tone of the press and the eagerness with which the campaign of vilification is waged against France for allowing war materials to cross the Pyrenees.

The campaign loses sight of the fact that the main battles waged now are not on the Catalan front but in the direction of Castellon. The loyalists there are separated from Catalonia by nearly 40 miles of rebel-held coastline, hence material crossing the Pyrenees cannot possibly reach them. Their supplies are sea-borne and unloaded at Alicante and Valencia.

Against these ports Italian planes serving the rebels are intensifying their attacks. Every day the Italian press carries a list of achievements of "legionary" aviation. The vital assistance which Italian planes are rendering to Gen. Francisco Franco is not disguised, but on the contrary is magnified. It is an open secret also that planes are being replaced as fast as they are cracked up or shot down.

War conditions are hard on planes which in Spain do not last more than about three months. Similarly, nobody makes much secret of the fact that Italian pilots are constantly being relayed to Spain both to fill the gaps and replace others who have served their term. The average period is three months which, it is considered, will give the pilot all-round experience in service conditions. Spain is frankly used as a training ground. Premier Mussolini spoke with authority when he boasted last March that Italy had more men accustomed to war conditions than any other country.

There is no doubt that when the Anglo-Italian agreement was reached the Italians expected the Ebro offensive to be decisive, and they are disappointed to find that loyalist resistance continues. The Italians believe, however, that victory is in sight and if a big effort is made now, it could be brought about fairly soon before the Republicans have time to reorganize themselves thoroughly.

Truth Will Out

By Barnet Nover.

Where Propaganda Breaks Down.

IN THE QUIVER of Dr. Goebbel's and other arch-propagandists are many poisoned arrows—falsehoods dressed up as truth, lies manufactured out of whole cloth, pointed exaggerations, and above all, suppression. Government in totalitarian states rests to no small degree on a conspiracy of silence.

In Germany's case this is strikingly illustrated in the matter of the government's financial operations. Every citizen knows to a pfenning what his tax burden is. But to what purpose the government puts the receipts from tax and other sources is carefully hidden from the public gaze. The last officially announced budget of the Third Reich made its appearance four years ago. There has been none since.

Germans can only guess the sums being spent by their government and to what purposes. They have never been vouchsafed even the slightest inkling as to what the national debt happens to be. But without this popular ignorance, as Prof. Roberts has pointed out in his book "The House That Hitler Built," the fantastic structure of German finance might topple to the ground.

* * * *

Relatively the same secrecy has been employed in Italy since the war with Ethiopia to keep from Italians the true facts of the precarious financial situation. The theory is that what the people do not know will not hurt them.

But it is not only with refenrec to financial matters that totalitarian governments employ the device of suppression as a means of keeping the people in line. The same device is used with respect to each and every matter regarding which publication of facts might weaken the government's popular support by calling into question measures sponsored by the dictatorship.

For a long time, for instance, the Italian press refrained from every mention of Italian activities in Spain. Mussolini's war in the Iberian peninsula was in its inception and for some months a secret war.

But suppression as a propagandist device has its very clear limitations. Italy's intervention in Spain is a case in point. It was obviously impossible indefinitely to keep from the Italian people the fact that their fellow nationals were being shipped to Spain by the hundreds and the thousands, that many of them were being killed and wounded.

Moreover, when the Italian "volunteers" began to win victories or what could be made out to be victories, the Fascist regime found it unexpedient to keep silent any longer. They proclaimed such triumphs with loud cheers.

The battle of Guadalajara, however, was not a victory, but a defeat for Italian arms. At that moment the device of supression was again employed. Only now are Italians beginning to hear of that battle and interestingly enough, as a victory for the Black Shirts. But it is doubtful if this propagandist distortion is receiving full credence in the kingdom.

* * * *

THE MOST important development of recent days for all Europe, including Italy was of course Germany's absorption of Austria. This was a fact which no propaganda ministry could conceal. Nor was any attempt made to do so. What was done, not least by Mussolini himself, was to emphasize the inevitable nature of this absorption and to assert with vehemence that the development left the Berlin-Rome axis stronger—not weaker.

At this point, however, propaganda breaks down in the face of unconcealable realities. The fact that Germany is now firmly entrenched along the Brenner Pass speaks louder than all of the reassuring orations of the Duce and his controlled press.

Truth will out even in the most regimented of lands. For sometimes, propaganda itself gives the case away.

When Japan began its undeclared war on China just eleven months ago the Japanese people were told in unmistakeable terms that the war would be over in a short time. To emphasize this point the Diet was asked to vote only a relatively small sum of money for the liquidation of the latest "China Incident."

Since then the Japanese have been told of little except victories,—past, present, and just around the corner. But no amount of propaganda can change the fact that what was to have been a short war and a speedy victory is now proving to be a long war with victory still far from sight. The Japanese people are at last being told the unpalatable truth regarding the situation and it is all the more unpalatable for having been kept from them so long.

* * * *

THERE HAS BEEN a tendency in democratic countries to exaggerate the effectiveness of the propagandist tactics in totalitarian states. Unquestionably these tactics have and continue to be enormously useful to the dictators. But it is well to remember that, even while Dr. Goebbels and his imitators may seem to be able to make white appear black, and black white, there is a limit to what they can do even with their own regimented populations.

Lies may have a long life. But they are not eternal. By the same token governments which rest on distortion and suppression are also not eternal. For no structure is stronger than it foundations.

Observer Finds Little Preference For South In Wage-Hour Legislation Compromise; Notes Check On Administrators.

By Mark Sullivan.

THE WAGE AND HOUR BILL, it is believed, will be passed by both branches of Congress this week. The bill in its present form is a compromise between the House form and the Senate form. It is said to be, also, a compromise between North and South.

SULLIVAN.

The compromise between North and South, if it exists at all, must lie somewhere within the intricate administrative provisions of the bill. On the surface there is no compromise. The minimum wage, at the beginning, is uniform throughout the country—25 cents an hour the first year, 30 cents the second year—later ranging up to an ultimate 40 cents at the end of seven years. It is specifically provided that "no minimum wage rate shall be fixed solely on a regional basis."

That looks like denial of any special consideration for the South. It looks like a detail of compromise inserted to please the North. At the same time there is latitude to make variations on some other grounds which are called "relevant factors." They include "competitive conditions as affected by transportation, living and production costs." Doubtless that may be a detail of compromise intended to offset the denial of regional discrimination, and to satisfy the South. Difference in "living costs" seems much the same as difference between North and South.

"Industry Committees" To Recommend Schedules.

THE LAW is to be administered by an administrator in the Department of Labor. The administrator is directed to set up "industry committees" for each industry. These industry committees are much like NRA and doubtless are inspired by experience with NRA. There will probably be 300 to 500 such committees. Each industry committee is to consist of three groups—"disinterested persons representing the public; a like number of persons representing employes, and a like number representing employers."

The industry committees are given much room for activity, yet only so much power as is contained in the word "recommend"—"the committee shall recommend to the administrator the highest minimum wage rates for the industry . . ."

After the industry committee "recommends" a minimum wage, the administrator, after hearing, "shall by order approve and carry into effect the recommendation." Or, the administrator may "disapprove such recommendation." If the administrator disapproves, he must again refer the matter to the industry committee. If the industry committee stands pat, the administrator can dismiss them and appoint a new committee. Apparently, if I read the act correctly, the administrator cannot fix a minimum wage in any industry until he first gets a recommendation from the industry committee, or appoints a new industry committee that will give him the kind of recommendation he likes.

Administrator Names Committee Memberships.

IT WILL BE observed that an industry does not name its committee. They are named by the administrator. If a committee named by the administrator "runs out" on him, and does not make the recommendations the administrator wants—in that event the administrator just fires his first committee and appoints a new one.

Nevertheless, in the writing of the act, there was some effort to avoid giving excessive arbitrary power to a Government official, to keep a good deal of check within the hands of the committee representing the industry. This means that Congress is consciously retreating from the practice of a few years ago, which was to give Government officials as much power as they asked for in bills which, in the recent past, were frequently written by Government officials and passed by Congress without material change. Congress, in short, is disposed to withhold arbitrary power from Government officials, is disposed to safeguard the citizen to some extent, against arbitrary power.

This appears in the provisions for review by the courts. "Any person aggrieved by an order of the administrator . . . may obtain a review of such order" in the courts. In such reviews the courts are not required to limit their reviews strictly to the evidence already introduced before the administrator. The courts can permit the aggrieved person "to adduce additional evidence" if "it is shown to the satisfaction of the court that such additional evidence may materially affect the result of the proceedings." The courts may do this "in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as the court may deem proper." This is a concession to the courts and to the principle of judicial review of a kind that some New Deal officials do not like.

Inspections Sanctioned By Conference Agreement.

THE ACT contains a section entitled "investigations, inspections and records." Agents of the administrator "may enter and inspect such places and such records, question such employes and investigate such facts, practices or conditions, as he may deem necessary or appropriate." This is likely to bring a groan from businessmen, even the considerable number of them who approve the idea of minimum wages and maximum hours.

Many industries are exempted. The exemptions from some or all of the provisions of the act include persons engaged in the first processing of dairy products, or in the ginning and compressing of cotton, or in the processing of sugar beets, sugar cane, or maple sap; or in the first processing or canning of perishable fruits or perishable vegetables, or in the slaughtering or dressing of poultry or livestock. Another exception is local weekly or semiweekly newspapers having a circulation of less than 3,000.

One board exemption is farming. "Any person engaged in agriculture is not affected. Yet if the farmer thinks the Government cannot, or will not fix wages and hours for his hired men, he will probably in due course find himself disillusioned. Almost always, regulation marches on; rarely does it retreat. Already, under another act—the sugar act passed some time ago—AAA fixes wages for the labor of beet raisers who qualify for benefit payments. I quote from an AAA announcement of April 5, 1938:

"The Agriculture Adjustment Administration announced today a determination of 'fair and reasonable' wage rates to be paid to sugar beet laborers."

Amateur Vandal Loots Library of Old Bookbinding

An exhibition case at the Library of Congress has been looted, first time such an act has been perpetrated in the memory of officials, and a seventeenth century Persian bookbinding stolen.

The theft occurred shortly before closing hours Sunday and was reported to police yesterday.

Martin A. Roberts, chief assistant librarian, said the binding possessed only nominal value.

"It was obviously the work of an amateur seeking a souvenir, rather than a person who knew something about such covers," he declared. "After forcing the display case, possibly with a screw driver, he took the binding of relatively little value instead of any of the more precious ones of greater antiquity.

By Ralph Barnes.

Copyright, 1938, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berlin, June 13.—The intensified campaign of the Nazi authorities against the Jews produced developments on two fronts today.

RALPH BARNES.

First, the blank forms were made available for the registration of Jewish property under the decree of April 26. Field Marshal Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering is authorized to employ property so registered "in line with the needs of Germany's economy." This decree is held to be the preliminary step to the conversion of the bulk of property held by German Jews in the Reich or abroad into nontransferable State bonds bearing a low interest rate.

The instructions issued with the forms remove all doubt that under the decree Jews of foreign citizenship are required to register that portion of their property held in the Reich. The sharp American protest of May 9 against this feature insofar as it might affect the property of American citizens of the Jewish race, has not been officially answered.

The second development was a new wave of interest of Jews in the Berlin area. An undetermined number were routed out of their homes by the police early this morning and taken to headquarters. These arrests followed mass raids May 29 on cafes in the Kurfuerstendamm area, frequented by Jews. Efforts tonight to secure information as to the reason for this morning's arrests proved unavailing.

Holdings valued at under 5,000 marks are exempt. Detailed instructions show the only specific exemptions are for "portable objects intended exclusively for personal use" and "household goods which are not objects of luxury." It is specifically noted that jewelry is to be listed.

Persistent reports have been current that arrangements were made in the recent Italian-German negotiations for the exemption of Italian Jews with property in the Reich from the provisions of the registration decrees. If this were to prove the case, Washington would be able to present an excellent case of discrimination against American Jews.

Though the instructions issued today with the registration blanks failed to mention the point, reports were heard the date by which registration blanks must be filed, originally fixed for June 30, is to be extended.

A sweeping definition of the term Jew is adopted for the purpose of the decree. For example, a separate registration must be made even in the case of an illegitimate child having one Jewish parent after July 31, 1936, that is to say, a child under two years of age.

Bremen's Captain Vacations to Miss U. S. Spy Inquiry

New York, June 13 (U.P.).—Capt. Adolph Ahrens, master of the German Liner Bremen, who was wanted for testimony before a Federal grand jury investigating an international spy ring, has been temporarily removed from command of the vessel and will not be available for the grand jury, it was learned today.

The North German Lloyd Line announced Capt. Ahrens was taking a vacation, and would be relieved by Capt. S. W. Hagenann.

Four members of the Bremen crew are held under bond, ranging from $5,000 to $15,000, as material witnesses in the inquiry. Ahrens' removal from the list of available witnesses makes the third major loss of this character, two witnesses having escaped to Germany on North German Lloyd liners. United States Attorney Lanar Hardy's office denied Ahrens' absence would hamper the Government's inquiry.

Japan Increasing China Opium Sale, U. S. Tells League

Geneva, June 13 (U.P.).—Accusations by a United States Government official that Japan is fostering the spread of opium traffic in China and Manchuria and is acting as feeder for the drug trade in America were made today before the opium advisory committee of the League of Nations.

Stuart J. Fuller, assistant chief of the Far Eastern Division of the State Department, told the committee the "illicit traffic is flourishing like the Green Bay tree" in regions of China under the control of the Japanese. He asked the committee to demand an explanation from Japan.

'Insulted' Waiter Serves Guest Soap

San Francisco, June 13 (AP).—Harry Karn, ship's waiter, was quoted today by Federal agents as saying he put washing powder in the mush served "an insulting woman" passenger on the liner President Cleveland. He waived a preliminary hearing on a charge of intent to commit murder on the high seas and was held under $25,000 bail. The woman did not eat the mush.

New Norway Liner.

New York, June 13 (AP).—The Norwegian-American line's new flagship Oslofjord arrived in New York harbor from Oslo today on her maiden transatlantic voyage. The Oslofjord, of 20,500 tons displacement, is 588 feet long and 73 feet wide with a draft of more than 26 feet. She is powered with Diesel engines and has a speed of 20 knots.

Japan Begins Push Against China's Capital

Japan

drome which now is available to the Japanese. The Yangtze River attack by the Japanese on Hankow upsets previous predictions on how long Hankow could be defended from an offensive via the Peiping-Hankow Railroad from Chengchow, the rail junction city 300 miles north of Hankow which the Chinese still hold.

River Boom Gone.

Reliable Japanese reports say the Chinese boom at Kiukiang, 32 miles above Anking, which is the only obstacle to the advance of the Japanese Navy upriver, is no longer effective because the sunken ships comprising it have been washed away.

The repeated Japanese bombings of Canton, Chinese ocean port 500 miles south of Hankow, obviously have two objects: First, to cut off the supplies reaching the provisional capital over the Canton-Hankow Railroad, and second, to impair the morale of the Cantonese, who now are largely financing the immediate cash needs of the Hankow government. The Japanese thrust at Hankow by river and land, if successful, will make impossible the importation of supplies via Canton, the only other routes being through Yunnan, the capital of Yunnan Province, via the French railway from French Indo-China and the overland route from the Soviet Union.

The collapse of Anking was disappointing to observers who believed the Chinese Anhwei defenses were capable of holding off the Japanese advance in that quarter for many weeks and at heavy cost to Japan. The Japanese, however, won the battle in a few hours and with but few casualties.

Hankow Drive Opens.

By the United Press.

Shanghai, Tuesday, June 14.—Japan today began her great drive on Hankow from advance bases on the Yangtze River within 175 miles of the flood-threatened Chinese provisional capital.

More than 300 Japanese war planes were concentrated at air fields between the Yangtze River ports of Wuhu and Anking, following the Japanese occupation of the latter city, capital of Anwei Province, yesterday.

Thousands of Japanese soldiers were going ashore from transports.

Other developments in the war included:

In Hankow the Chinese were preparing for "unprecedented" air raids by Japanese planes. They had brought in all their aircraft, some manned by Soviet Russian fliers in the employ of the Chinese government, and were confident they would give a good accounting. New antiaircraft batteries imported from Czechoslovakia were being added to the capital's already strong aerial defenses.

The Japanese drive in the Lunghai railway area, north of Hankow, appeared to have slackened following the action of the Chinese in cutting the dikes of the Yellow River and flooding huge areas of Honan Province south of that stream. Chengchow, where the east-west Lunghai line crosses the north-south Peiping-Hankow railway, appeared still to be in Chinese hands.

It was indicated, however, the Japanese would drive southward along the Peiping-Hankow line and attack strong Chinese positions in the mountains north of Hankow so more than 300,000 Chinese soldiers in this area would be kept engaged while the main Japanese drive on Hankow was carried forward south of the Yangtze.

[Lieut. Col. Yoshiaki Nishi, former military attache in the Japanese Embassy in Washington, was reported to have arrived at Hangchow by air from Tokyo to inspect American-owned property at Hangchow and Huchow, 40 miles north, occupied by Japanese, the Associated Press said.

[It was understood he planned to go to Nanking and other points for similar investigations as a result of the United States Government's request the properties be returned to their owners.—Editor's note.]

Because of the imminence of the Japanese mass attacks on his capital, Generalissimo Chiang again refused to send airplanes to Canton to defend that great South China metropolis from daily Japanese air raids which have caused more than 8,500 casualties.

French Envoy at Hankow.

In Hongkong the Japanese consul anti-aircraft batteries imported from American, French and British consuls general against air raids on Canton, by expressing deep regret and reiterating Japanese fliers had been instructed to respect foreigners, their property and rights.

Pittman Urges Senate to Back Hull on Bombs

Moves to Indorse Condemnation of Slaughter of Civilians.

By the United Press.

Chairman Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last night asked the Senate to approve the strong condemnation of the bombing of civilian populations uttered by Secretary of State Cordell Hull with the consent of President Roosevelt.

Pittman introduced a resolution seeking the vote of confidence and requesting a congressional study of the entire problem with a view toward determining what action can be taken to stop such practice.

Tells of Slaughter.

Praising the Administration's policy toward the indiscriminate bombing of civilians in Spain and China, Pittman warned that "thousands of defenseless persons are being ruthlessly bombed, killed or wounded." He asked that his committee be empowered to make the inquiry.

Pittman pointed out in the resolution that Hull also has expressed the government's disapproval of the export sale of American aircraft to countries where such aircraft are used for the bombing of the civilian population.

The resolution asked that the Senate record its condemnation of the bombings and approve Hull's sentiments.

Bombings Called Barbaric.

Pittman summoned his committee to meet today to consider the resolution, which he hopes to put through the Senate before adjournment.

He pointed out that since the United States has an arms embargo against Spain, the resolution would apply directly to Japan.

"The bombing of civilian populations is barbaric and inhuman," he said. "No useful purpose is served by it. The purpose of the bombings obviously is to intimidate and break down the morale of the opposition." He added that in most instances it resulted in the opposite effect.

Three Resolutions Adopted.

Robert Norton, chairman of a national committee for boycotting Japan, today will present to President Roosevelt three resolutions protesting Japanese aggression, pledging boycott of Japanese goods and asking the President to declare an embargo of war materials and credits to Japan. The resolutions were adopted by 300 persons, meeting in Pierce Hall last night, under auspices of the Washington Labor Peace Committee.

Norton, with local clergymen and labor representatives, yesterday asked the State Department to take further action against bombing of civilians. They later conferred with Senator Pittman.

American Schools Defiant.

Peiping, June 13 (AP).—Two American universities and a French institution today defied orders of the Japanese-established North China regime to participate in political parades and mass demonstrations against the Chinese government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Foreign educators considered the defiance a last stand for academic freedom in the North China region conquered by Japan at the outset of the undeclared war.

Session Aided Defense Most, Woodring Says

Legislation Called More Vital Than Any Since the World War.

A record-breaking peacetime program for expanding the military and naval defenses of the United States stood out yesterday as one of the major accomplishments of the 1938 Congress.

Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring told House leaders that more important legislation to strengthen the country's armed forces had been enacted this year than at any time since the World War.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, meanwhile, favorably reported the House-approved $277,000,000 third deficiency bill after adding $500,000 for beginning construction on an experimental dirigible for the Navy. The measure carries nearly $36,000,000 to start construction under the billion-dollar naval expansion program.

Roosevelt Signs Bill.

At the White House, President Roosevelt signed a bill permitting the Army to use 21,500 men in the Air Corps instead of the present maximum of 18,400. Officials said the measure provides merely for the transfer of 3,100 men to the flying service from other branches of the Army and would not result in any increase in military personnel.

While the Army thus received additional men for building up its air defenses, guarded assurances were given that better protection would save large cities from the bomb devastation suffered by Barcelona and Canton.

Lieut. Col. Roger B. Colton, of the Army Signal Corps, forecast in the Coast Artillery Journal that if war broke out now between world powers:

"In the face of reasonable (but very expensive) defense measures, clear weather, day bombing of large cities will cease very quickly if undertaken. Clear weather night bombing . . . can be rendered unprofitable by proper (but very expensive) defense."

Keel Will Be Laid.

The Navy also announced yesterday that the keel of the Washington, second battleship to be begun under the new construction program, would be laid today at ceremonies in the Philadelphia Navy Yard. The Washington's sister ship, the North Carolina, is under construction at the New York Navy Yard.

Direct appropriations totaling more than $1,000,000,000 have been voted to run the Army and Navy during the next fiscal year. In addition, the mammoth new building program will permit the Navy to add 46 warships and 26 auxiliary vessels to its previous top strength. Nine hundred and fifty more naval airplanes can be acquired, and a "mystery fleet" of swift coastal patrol boats and subchasers can be developed.

18 Warships Provided.

Congress already has given the Navy funds to start 18 of the warships—two battleships, two cruisers, eight destroyers and six submarines. A bill carrying money for two more battleships and two light cruisers is pending in the Senate.

A total of seven auxiliary vessels, in which the Navy is most deficient, can be started in the coming fiscal year. They include seaplane, destroyer and submarine tenders, oil tankers, tugs and a minesweeper.

A $6,000,000 for new antiaircraft equipment also has been approved by Congress. It will be used principally for units which can be moved about at high speeds, thus affording protection for a greater number of cities.

Both the Army and the Navy got funds for new ammunition storage facilities and for acquiring emergency stores of "strategic" materials, such as tungsten, manganese and tin, with which the United States is insufficiently supplied.

Kissed Blarney Stone

Helen Borsos, 19, who couldn't find a job on June 1 did something she never had done before—"drank a glass of beer for lunch instead of eating anything." After that, she said, "I didn't remember what happened until I woke up in the chapel of the Normandie," the beginning of her stowaway trip to Europe. Back home yesterday, she kissed a collector's piece of blarney stone (above). A few minutes later she landed a job as a stenographer. She had been unemployed a year.

Baltimore Bomb Suspect Is Seized

Baltimore, June 13 (AP).—Police charged late today a 42-year-old man who said he is a produce merchant with one of the two bombings which shattered the early-morning quietness of Baltimore within 24 hours.

The charge accused Herman Fink, who gave a Baltimore address, of "assault with intent to murder one William Adams, colored, by placing a bomb early today which exploded at Adams' tavern." No one was injured. Police believe there is a connection between today's blast and one in a residential section of the city Sunday. Two persons were slightly injured.

insurgent column under Gen. Martin Alonzo skirted around the southern outskirts, seized the port of El Grao and closed a bottleneck offering the only escape south to Sacunto and Valencia.

Highway Bombed.

Squadrons of Gen. Franco's bombers meanwhile roared down the coast, bombing and machine-gunning highways, towns and villages all the way to Alicante in an effort to shatter loyalist morale.

Loyalist officials said the bombers, riping up the 25-mile stretch of highway between Castellon de la Plana and Sagunto, were bombing and machine-gunning terrorized men, women and children fleeing from the besieged provincial capital.

[The government reported today that Romulo Negrin, son of Premier Juan Negrin, was injured when an insurgent plane he had disabled crashed into his own pursuit ship, the Associated Press said.

[Young Negrin was said to have shot down the insurgent plane in an air battle over the eastern Spanish front.

[The falling insurgent ship smashed through a wing of Negrin's ship, injuring him and disabling his plane. He took to his parachute and came down behind his own lines.

[The government said 14 American war prisoners may be exchanged soon.—Editor's Note.]

Occupation of Grao de Castellon bit off the narrow bottleneck out of which the government Generalissimo, Jose Miaja, had been pouring troops from the north for 24 hours in a hasty effort to prevent them from being trapped.

Silver Shipped Out.

Perpignan, France, June 13 (AP).—A procession of trucks bearing 1,484 cases of silver valued at 50,000,000 francs ($1,400,000) crossed the French-Spanish border at Le Perthus today, en route from Barcelona. The destination could not be learned.

20 Held, $100,000 Gems Recovered

Florence, Italy, June 13 (AP).—Police announced today arrest of 20 persons from whom they recovered a large part of the $100,000 worth of jewelry stolen from Villa Mariani, home of Mrs. John Kerr Branch, formerly of Richmond, Va.

The arrests were made here and in Milan, where the jewelry had been sold for $5,000 cash and a promise of additional payments later.

Baltimore Man Held For Bombing Tavern

Baltimore, June 13 (AP).—Herman Fink, 42, self-described produce merchant, was charged by police late today with one of two bombings which shook sections of this city within 24 hours.

Fink was accused in a charge on the police docket with "assault with intent to murder" William Adams, colored, "by placing a bomb" on the premises of his tavern. Fink was held without bail for hearing Thursday.

Sudetens Win Consideration Of 8 Demands

By the United Press.

Prague, June 13.—The Sudeten German party indicated tonight it may demand a formal plebiscite on its autonomy demands, despite a government threat of martial law in Sudeten areas, unless Konrad Henlein's eight-point program is accepted.

The militant Sudeten stand was taken shortly after a government spokesman announced Premier Milan Hodza has agreed to negotiate with the German party leaders on Henlein's demands for the "right of self-determination" in an effort to find a compromise solution of the minority crisis.

"The government's willingness to negotiate on Henlein's demands cannot, however, be taken as acceptance of them," the spokesman said.

Election Trend Cited.

Henlein, Nazi-supported "Czechoslovak Hitler," announced a 90 per cent Sudeten party victory in German areas in yesterday's windup of a series of municipal elections "showed the world the necessity of fufilling the Sudeten German party's demands."

"More than 90 per cent of the Germans of this state have declared themselves in favor of the party and its policies," he said.

The party's spokesman said these demands—Henlein's eight-point program for sweeping autonomy for Czechoslovakia's German minority of 3,500,000—must be met as result of the election mandate.

"Nowhere outside Germany and Italy has any sngle party ever been able to mass 90 per cent of the people behind its policies the way we have done," he said.

"Hoping for the Best."

Asked about the prospects of a demand for a formal plebiscite on the question of complete autonomy, or perhaps ultimate union with Germany, the party spokesman said:

"We are not considering it at present and are hoping for the best in our negotiations with the government, but, naturally, if these negotiations fail we must consider other ways of obtaining Henlein's eight demands."

An authoritative government informant said the government would ignore any demands for a plebiscite among the German minority and was prepared to back up its stand with the army.

"Czechoslovakia is already under military law since the May 21 crisis," he said, "and certain sections could be placed in a state of siege if they forced it."

Henlein's claim of support by 90 per cent of the German minority was officially disputed by the government tonight. A spokesman for the government said that instead of 90 per cent, Henlein actually polled only 81 per cent of the German vote in the three elections, the other 19 per cent going to the non-Nazi German Social Democrats. In Sudeten region towns of mixed populations, the government said, Henlein's strength dropped as low as 67 per cent.

The government's decision to use Henlein's demands as a partial basis of negotiation came after long cabinet consultations.

Nazi Organ's Warning.

Berlin, June 13 (AP).—A foreign office mouthpiece warned the Czechoslovak government today delay in solving the Sudeten German question "will lead only to a more forcible solution."

The organ, the Diplomatische Politische Korrespondenz, advised the Praha administration to impress upon the Czech people "that they have no supremacy rights or special prerogatives" outside the purely Czech areas of the young republic.

Britain Is Against Any Wagner Act, Labor Head Says

Geneva, June 13 (U.P.).—British Minister of Labor Ernest Brown told the International Labor Conference today Great Britain, whose labor relations will be studied by an American commission, prefers voluntary co-operation between employers and workers to any system imposed by law.

United States Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who a few minutes before had declared that the Wagner labor relations act has put American industrial relations on the most solid footing in years, heard Brown speak.

It was learned John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, has instructed his brother, A. D. Lewis, now in Geneva as a delegate, to reject an appointment to the commission, which will visit England.

Man Falls Asleep In Taxi, Loses $80 And Gets Put Out

Ray Everetts, of Woods Corner, Md., took a taxicab at Fourteenth and H streets northwest early yesterday and asked to be driven to Hagerstown, Md. His trip cost him $80, but he never reached his desired destination.

Everetts was at police headquarters yesterday looking through identification pictures at the hack inspector's office, attempting to pick out the likeness of his driver.

He said he fell asleep en route, his pockets were picked and he was forced from the cab a short way out of the District, on the Rockville pike.

Machine Guns Kill Cedillo Henchmen

Puebla, Mexico, June 13 (AP).—Machine guns ended today a rebellion led by Brig. Gen. Enrique Espejel Chavarria, reputed follower of Gen. Saturnino Cedillo, also hunted as a rebel.

Espejel and his brother died in a battle with Puebla policemen near Chipilo Village. Two policemen were killed.

Espejel was dropped from the army as of May 16 for "presumption of guilt of rebellion." He fled into the Hidalgo hills and organized a rebel band.

Ability to Act Is an Elusive Human Quality

By Richard Watt, jr.

There has been no performance during this last season that has dominated the theater as completely as did Maurice Evans' King Richard II but good acting has been gratifyingly plentiful the year before. There have been some notably bad portrayals, particularly in the revivals of Shakespeare and Ibsen, but, on the whole, when plays have failed it has been the fault of the playwright rather than of the actor. Although the constant forays that Hollywood has conducted against the unprotected Broadway stage have made casting difficult, it is certainly true that there has been no decline in the quality of the acting during recent seasons. I do not say this as dogmatically as I say most things, because it is so frequently impressed upon me that acting is some sort of mystic rite that should be discussed only amid breathless references to the word "technique." Since an actors' technique is, to my mind, a sort of private affair of his dealing with the means by which he achieves the qualities of a characterization that some author has written for him, I am not nearly as much interested in it as I am in that of the author, and I am concerned chiefly with the player's effects rather than the method that he employs to secure them. If it is force of personality or pleasantness of feature, rather than a knowledge of timing and spacing, that secures the proper effects, I am just as satisfied.

WATTS.

Because of my concern with results rather than causes in acting, I find myself accused of being what the boys around the literary clubs call "a sucker for a pretty face," which is their cultured manner of suggesting that I am as susceptible as any tired businessman to good looks in an actress. It is only fair for me to confess that I have frequently written in such a way as to justify this belief. Nor do I wish to destroy any such idea. I would merely like to enlarge upon it. My contention is not that good looks are necessary either to actresses or to good acting. If I did not mind being less chivalrous than even a dramatic critic should be, I might mention names which would suggest that I didn't always demand beauty in my favorite actresses. My point is merely that no actress has ever yet been harmed by the fact that she was lovely to look at, and that, since the creation of beauty is one of the functions of dramatic art, physical beauty in the stage's women should not be overlooked. My crusade has been against those who regard acting as such a mystic rite that it can be learned only after decades of application, and is a gift bestowed only upon the mature and the uncomely.

The fact that one of the most effective performances of the season was given by a 7-year-old boy named Peter Holden, in "On Borrowed Time," might be thought to dispose of the legend that acting skill comes only after years of study and application. But, being a reasonably fair controversialist, I will admit that any such contention is a bit extreme. The number of fine portrayals given by children on the stage and screen certainly does go to suggest that there is something immature about this business of painting your face and pretending that you are somebody else. But to say that there is a touch of infantalism about the desire to become an actor and the capacity to be one is not to sneer at the profession so much as to explain certain aspects of acting.

The ability to mimic, a complete lack of self-consciousness and a malleability of personality—these are qualities of utmost importance in acting, and they are qualities that a child possess to a great degree. Thus it is, to be a competent player you must recapture many of the traits of your childhood. The child has the head start toward providing a good performance, and the adult actor has to work hard to catch up to him. That, however, does not mean that the more amiable qualities of childhood are the only ones that an actor must possess. Until a 17-year-old child can play Richard II as well as Maurice Evans, no one can say that acting is merely a juvenile business. That it smacks of juvenility is true, but that is only one characteristic of it.

It seems to me that to give the sort of performance that a play needs to bolster it up is one of the requisites of good acting. For example, Miss Ethel Barrymore has an actress' field day all over the place in "Whiteoaks," doing almost everything but swinging from the chandeliers to attract your attention and hold your interest. Now, if "Whiteoaks" were a distinguished work of art, that might be the wrong way to play the role of the 101-year-old grandmother of the drama. It happens, however, that it is a feeble and bloodless play that requires heroic measures to give it life and excitement. Miss Barrymore took advantage of the requirements, added the necessary qualities of showmanship and vitality, even at the cost of being accused of overacting, and thereupon offered one of the most effective portrayals of the season, in addition to supplying her play with a pulmotor. Vehicles, as I understand it, are usually intended to carry some one. When some one carries a vehicle, that is news, or, in the case of a play like "Whiteoaks," it is acting.

Starlet Fashions Own Film Gown

Ann Rutherford, who is Mickey Rooney's "steady girl" in the Judge Hardy Family pictures, is designing and making the evening gown which she will wear in "Love Finds Andy Hardy."

The gown, girlish, but with a low back, is patterned after an exclusive model. Miss Rutherford is making the dress at a cost of $4.95.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Nonpartisan Story of Strife in Spain Decries Murder of Noncombatants; Film Row Deserted; That Hoover Luncheon; Notes of Theater.

IT IS a doubly courageous and hazardous feat that Walter Wanger has attempted in his production of "Blockade," coming to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday.

First, he has undertaken to weld together vigorous antiwar propaganda and exciting, romantic entertainment; secondly, he has had the temerity to place the locale of his drama in Spain in 1936, thus incurring the displeasure of certain European factions that resent his impertinence.

BELL.

It was made clear to yesterday's preview audience in the theaterette in the twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange—and this particular audience embraced delegations from many antiwar groups and societies in Washington—that Mr. Wanger has exercised scrupulous care to avoid taking sides in the present Spanish civil conflict. No known uniforms are reproduced, no telltale accents are employed by the players. In fact, every member of the cast, with the single exception of Leo Carrillo, speaks his lines in straight, untwisted English with many mispronunciations of the simplest Spanish words and names.

In short, it seemed to me yesterday that Mr. Wanger might as well have called his country Graustark as Spain, so far as any definite identification of provinces, cities or peoples was conerned. Yet, the indictment of the sort of warfare that is being waged in both Spain and China was as unmistakable in intent as it was outspoken and damnatory.

For the entertainment elements in his attack not alone upon present localized wars, but upon all modern warfare waged among civilized nations, Mr. Wanger has selected the more or less familiar devices of espionage, official treachery and a romantic attachment between the most beautiful of the spies and the simple and idealistic rustic who loves his lands and rebels against their being drenched in innocent blood. This movement of the story pursues a cumulative course of melodramatic violence, with the bombing of noncombatant women and children, the ruthless slaughter of suspected traitors to a doubtful cause and the running of the food blockade of a beleauguered town by a richly laden supply ship.

There are, of course, the usual excitements and thrills of violent drama in these scenes of wanton destruction of both life and property. But one senses, after it all is over, that Mr. Wanger's major purpose was a timely and an eloquent preachment against the ghastly shambles modern war, with all of its mechanized instruments of destruction, has become. This is emphasized by the final speech of the play, spoken by Henry Fonda, as the rebellious young farmer, in these words:

"Peace! Where can you find it? Our country has been turned into a battlefield. There's no safety for old people and children. Women can't keep their families safe in their houses. They can't be safe in their own fields. Church, hospitals and schools are targets. It's not war. War is fought between soldiers. It's murder—murder of innocent people. There's no sense to it. The world CAN stop it. WHERE'S THE CONSCIENCE OF THE WORLD?"

• • • •

I, for one, extend congratulations to my good friend Walter Wanger, not for having contrived the perfect screen entertainment, but for having had the courage to lay down a terrific barrage against the type of modern conflict that carries guerrilla warfare into the air and under the sea to bring havoc to the tranquil places of the earth upon no more defensible a pretext than a wanton lust to kill—and for having made it so pointed that none can fail to understand his message.

• • • •

Washington's "Film Row," the village of branch film exchanges that spreads out in all directions from the corner of New Jersey avenue and K street northwest, was pretty thoroughly depopulated over the week-end. Scarcely an exchange manager remained on his local job.

It seems that the Motion Picture Theater Owners of Virginia held their annual, one-day convention yesterday at Virginia Beach and all the boys and their wives and girl friends snapped at the excuse to have themselves a time down at the Cavalier—golf, knock-rummy, dancing and the rest of their favorite indoor and outdoor sports.

In the back of their minds, too, probably was the surreptitious notion of getting a few of the less wily of the Virginia theater owners to scribble their names on the dotted line. After all, a contract is a contract, whether you get it at the nineteenth hole or in the office.

And that reminds me. The Variety Club of Washington is having what is technically known as a tough time trying to toss its luncheon in honor of J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

It was first planned to tender Mr. Hoover a luncheon at the Willard a week ago yesterday, when he was to have been made an honorary member of all Variety Clubs in America, with Johnny Harris, Chief Barker of the national organization, down from Pittsburgh for the occasion. Then the Cash kidnaping case broke in Florida and the event was postponed until yesterday. No soap, as Arch McDonald would say. With the clearing up of the Cash case, new developments occurred in the Levine tragedy.

Eventually, Mr. Hoover will be honored by Variety, but one suspects that he himself will have to name the day and date. Washington's Tent No. 11 is proud of J. Edgar Hoover and his record. If you were to ask him, Mr. Hoover probably would reply, "and vice versa."

There is more than immediately meets the ear in the gurgling water effect that trademarks Shep Fields' "rippling rhythm" music, on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater this week.

That bubbling brook business is produced by blowing through a straw into a bowl of water, but Maestro Fields confides that only one kind of vessel will satisfactorily serve his purpose. It has to be precisely right or the "ripples" will not have the proper tone for amplification over the loudspeaker system in a theater or the radio.

"I experimented with dozens of different types of containers, from finger bowls to goldfish bowls, but I didn't come across exactly what I needed until I played the Palmer House in Chicago," Mr. Fields explains. "They served me fruit salad one night in precisely the kind of bowl I had been looking for. So I swiped one each night for six successive nights."

But it develops that Mr. Fields will have to get himself another Palmer House booking in a hurry. He has only two of the bowls left!

• • • •

So today we'll go to "Crime School," in the Warner private projection room in the Earle Theater Building. They say it is as distinctive a picture, in its way, as "Blockade." It might well be, with those "Dead End" kids and Humphrey Bogart in it. More of this later—I hope. How you may feel about it is something else again.

• • • •

Manager Stephen E. Cochran has installed what he calls his "Cohan corner" in the foyer of the dining room that forms one of the units of his new Olney Theater project, out on the Columbia pike, midway between Washington and Baltimore. It contains autographed photographs of the famous author-actor-composer-producer in almost every character in which he has appeared during the past 25 years.

In view of the close friendship that has existed between Manager Cochran and the star of "I'd Rather Be Right" for something like 30 years, it seems especially appropriate that this collection of portraits should be hung just where it is.

The-Morning-After Note.

How did you like The Post's broadcast over WRC last night—all but one part of it?

'Sweeney Todd' Is Melodrama Of Old Vintage

Last night's inauguration of the fifth summer season of the Roadside spicious occasion.

Theater was not on entirely au-

Added to the frailties of an antiquated play that lacks a majority of the virtues that have been possessed by its predecessors in the same category of resurrected melodramas of an earlier and a cruder era in the theater, was a lack of preparation for "opening night" that delayed the first curtain from 8:40 until 9:15 o'clock. The between-scenes waits also were in elongated contrast with the swift changes that have characterized the Roadside productions in previous seasons.

The initial bill, "Sweeney Todd, or the Demon Barber of Fleet Street," is regarded by some authorities as the first play ever written, dedicated frankly to crime. From the crudity of its construction and the feebleness of its lines, one can believe this to be true. It was written by George Dibdin Pitt and first performed in the Brittania Theater, Hoxton, in 1842.

Sweeney Todd was a murderous tonsorialist, deformed both mentally and physically, who greeted each customer with the sotto voce aside that he thought he would have to "polish him off," a clubby observation signifying that the victim would be tossed backward out of the trick barber chair into a cellar dungeon to perish. The remains then would be surreptitiously conveyed to Mrs. Lovett's bakery shop where they would be consumed in one of her oven crematories.

Among the ostensible victims were a handsome young mariner, just back from Indian waters, heavily laden with pearls and gold, to claim the hand of his sweetheart; a scoundrel in the guise of a member of the cloth; the village lapidary, who knew too much about the pearls stolen from the mariner for Sweeney's peace of mind, and anyone else who threatened to betray the traffic in homicide and robbery being conducted under the guise of legitimate business.

There is little brutality to a small apprentice boy thrown in for good measure and a few casual stabbings and shootings, besides. This is all simplified by the author's habitual care that no more than two or three characters be on stage at the same time. The piece is played in 3 acts and 13 scenes, each scene scarcely longer than the waits between.

The audience evidently had a more enjoyable time than the actors, what with all of the hissing, booing and cat-calling. Some of the Roadside's most able players, incidentally, are in the cast, including Carl Christianson, in the title role; Howard Wierum, as the mariner; Maurice Jarvis, the "wolf in sheep's clothing"—according to the program—James Rawls, a dupe of the drama's most sinister figures; Miss Lansing Hall, the unhappy girl awatiing the return of her lover from the Far East, and Ann Ives, the Mrs. Lovett who was Sweeney's accomplice in guilt. Of these, Mr. Christianson, Howard Wierum and Anne Ives stood out conspicuously above the rest.

Perhaps it all simmers down to the fact that the Roadsiders should have refrained from flying in the face of superstition by opening their season on the 13th. N. B. B.

Acting Duos Coming ot Local Screens

OPENING FRIDAY AND ON THE WAY.

Above, Henry Fonda and Madeleine Carroll, as they appear in the costellar roles of Walter Wanger's production of "Blockade," coming to the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater on Friday. Inset, George Murphy and Andrea Leeds, as the young romantics in Universal's "Letter of Introduction."

THE WEDDING which drew the most publicity since the Windsor-Simpson nuptials was the one between Manuela Hudson and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt . . . Every newspaper front-paged it in headlines. The society reporters and sports columnists devoted all their space to the ceremonies. Even the newsreels covered it . . . Despite all this Nation-wide publicity, the bride's family yesterday sent announcements to their friends, informing them that Manuela Hudson had married Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt.

In HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 13.—Yippy! If it's a laugh you're looking for, hop into the saddle and ride with "Cowboy From Brooklyn." You'll get as many laughs as yippies. Not a lick of sense to it. But your old favorite, Dick Powell, is grand. You see him flying from a pigeon because he's afeared of birds and beasts. He's been marked by one of them — they don't tell you which one. It doesn't matter. It's funny.

HEDDA HOPPER

Pat O'Brien's words spill out from that dead pan face faster than ever, yet you understand them. Pat's a good one for the student of the drama to listen to. I bet he can pick a pack of pickled peppers faster than a machine gun if the words were written on bullets.

Priscilla Lane makes a right cute cowhand. All in all, "Cowboy From Brooklyn" will yip your blues away.

Seven actors should build a monument to Ronnie Colman for growing his own beard. Now that the barber has whittled it off, they have 17 days vacation. Naturally, the studios use the most expensive artists first. So the seven waited on full pay. Ronnie believes in comfort; rehearses in a blue dressing gown and wears dark glasses. Just before they shoot he buckles on the trappings.

Basil Rathbone's cackle and makeup are perfect disguises. You'll recognize his voice before you do him. And Monty Love's breastplate could be used to patch holes in Old Ironsides. Wonder how they got close enough to kiss a girl in those days?

Nice to see Bill Farnum back in there acting with those boys again. Bill was the first actor in the world to get $10,000 a week—and not for just a week, but for years. It was a loan from him that made the first payment on that strip of land at Western and Sunset where the old Fox Studio was built.

Bill used to have his string of horses, too. And private yachts. And he was the most generous of them all. He supported more families than some of our leading charities.

Shirley Ross had a bit of luck. She picked up three pieces of French furniture, tapestry covered, for $60. Has turned down $3,000 for them. The man who made the offer wants to show them at the San Francisco Exposition. But Shirley said: "I'm not going to sell—I like 'em." I should think she would.

Glen Echo Park.

Tom Gentry and his orchestra started another week's engagement last night at the Spanish Garden Ballroom at Glen Echo Park, and judging from the crowds on hand, his holdover was more than justified. Jeanne Carroll, vocalist of the outfit, continues to be one of the high spots of the ballroom's entertainment.

Over the week-end Glen Echo played host to hundreds of others besides the dancers. The Crystal pool lured the swim-minded, while other visitors sought recreation in the new "world cruise," the dodgem rides, with their new streamlined cars, the fast motor boats on the waterway canal, thrilling coaster dips, aeroplane swings and other zestful funmakers.

Champ Signed.

The Washington Post Celebrates Its Birthday Anniversary

The Washington Post's Air Party

Listeners Visit The Post's Society Department

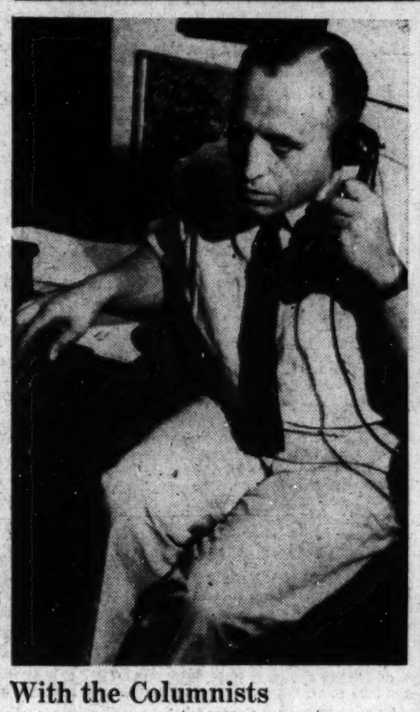
Dudley Harmon, society columnist, looks over the day's diary while Hope Ridings Miller, the society editor, receives a telephone item and Elizabeth M. Ford writes up a social function. The society department was one of many visited via the air waves.

The Din of the Busy City Room Goes on the Air

The clatter of typewriters as reporters prepared their stories of the day's events, shouts of "Copy!" for the waiting presses and the general din of the city room into which joys and tragedies of the world pour also went out over the air. Above is a view of a portion of The Post's busy city room.

Department Heads Tell Audience of Their Work

Arthur Chamberlin (right), telegraph editor, gives the radio audience the latest bulletin on the Chinese situation. Each department executive outlined briefly the functions of his department. Below, Noel Lynn (second from right), composing room foreman, explains how the written word becomes the printed word.



With the Columnists

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Reluctant to Marry, Yet Desperately Loved by Woman of 40, Divorced Man of 57 Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a man 57 years old and have three children grown and married. I have been separated from my family for many years and do not see any of them. I have been a very lonely man, in spite of the fact that women are attracted to me. I have been very much in love twice since my family estrangement and both times it left me with a broken heart and minus a good bit of money.

• • • •

My present problem is this: I have been going with a lady who is 40 years old. This lady always shares expenses when we go on trips and tries to help me. When I first met this lady I was lonely and went with her merely for companionship. We have been going together for some time now and I like her very much but she has fallen desperately in love with me. She has been very kind and considerate of the fact that I have been unhappy and she knows all about my past life. I think her own unhappy life and starved affections have made her feel this way toward me.

• • • •

I do not wish to hurt her. I enjoy being with her and cannot seem to make up my mind to cease seeing her. I want to be with her but do not wish to marry her. I enjoy going with her but I enjoy the attentions of other women, too. I have tried to find someone whom I could be more enthused about, but am unsuccessful. She knows that I do not love her enough to marry her, and at first she was unhappy about it, but didn't say much.

• • • •

I feel guilty because she is sweet, unselfish and kind, and I know she wants a home and marriage. Is it fair to continue seeing her, so long as she is willing? If I do meet someone else, I know she will be sweet and wish me luck, yet I know she will be hurt, but she is a Southerner and she has pride. Of course, I might not find someone else, and then I might marry her. She seems pretty unhappy lately, but before this she acted as though just seeing me was a joy. What shall I do?

R. M. O.

What to Believe.

DEAR R. M. O.: In my opinion, it is decidedly absurd for a man of 57, with a broken marriage behind him, to be beating the bushes in search of the perfect romance when he already has in his hand the bird of congenial companionship with a woman who loves him "desperately." Such nonsensical conduct writes him down as a confirmed adolescent, so far as his psychological development is concerned, and inclines one to sympathize with the decision of his former wife and grown children to ignore his existence.

• • • •

You lack the judgment and common sense to recognize and appreciate good fortune when you find it. If you have met a woman of 40 who is willing to accept you for what you are and idolize you in spite of it, you have found far more than your behavior merits. What are you looking over her shoulder and waiting for, anyway—a beautiful, virginal debutante, just out of finishing school, with millionaire means, to come riding over the horizon in papa's yacht and sweep you off your feet in the true love match of the ages? That, or something equally unrealizable, I have no doubt.

• • • •

It's downright pathetic that a man of your age should fancy himself so attractive to the fair sex that he hardly dare marry an agreeable woman lest he thereby waive his chances of mating with some "queen rose of the rosebud garden of girls." And particularly so when the only souvenirs he carried away from his two, serious, post-divorce attachments were a broken heart and a flat pocketbook.

• • • •

If you wish to avoid becoming an increasingly vulnerable target for women who make a game of exploiting men of your age and type as suckers and fools, you had better marry your 40-year-old, "pay-as-she-goes" friend and pray that she has the brains and resourcefulness to protect you both from your asinity. She must be a very heart-hungry woman indeed to regard you as much of a find; but her lack of choice is your good fortune, if only you had a sufficiently saving perspective on yourself to realize it. My advice to you is to hustle her to the altar before she comes to her senses, washes her hands of you, and turns you out to the she-wolves.

M. H.

Costa Rican's Query.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am on a visit here in the United States. I should like very much to get in touch with the Minister of the Costa Rican Legation. I am most unfortunate; I do not know his name and I have made an appointment to see him next week. I have been reading your column for the past few days and I thought that you might be able to answer my question. Thanking you for your kind assistance. SENORITA S. J.

• • • •

DEAR SENORITA S. J.: The name is Senor Don Ricardo Castro Beeche; the address (as you probably already know) is 2128 Bancroft place; and the telephone number, Potomac 4664. Should you find yourself in like dilemma again, don't hesitate to telephone the legation and ask for the information. It can be obtained without disclosing your own identity. The Department of State issues a "Diplomatic List" each month, copies of which are on file in newspaper offices, usually in the society department. M. H.

Strapless, Lace Gown Selected by Baroness

From Chanel the Baroness Eugene de Rothchild, a veritable barometer of style herself, has chosen a thoroughly romantic black lace gown. The tight bodice, completely strapless, is held up with ribbon lacing, while ribbon marks the bodice and the cuffs of matching black suede gloves. (Mlle. Chanel is particularly fond of ribbons this year.)

In complete contrast to the lace model, the baroness has selected a classic black silk jersey dress with long tight sleeves, from Paquin.

For Partying a la Gibson Girl

THIS GIBSON GIRL evening gown is just the type of dress for summer nights in Washington. Besides causing everyone to exclaim "How cool you look!" it will induce men to wait on you and to wonder if such a slender, fragile creature shouldn't be protected from a ruthless world. The material is white silk mousseline. It is made with shirtwaist top huge transparent sleeves dust ruffle and a black velvet girdle. To be worn with a modern version of the porcelain lily bracelet.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, June 13.

NORWAY AND HOLLYWOOD can split their little blonde darling, Sir Sonja Henie, two ways. We New Yorkers, still gripped by the skating madness which held us all last winter, have an ice maiden peculiarly our own. Her name is Evelyn Chandler, and she is a pretty and clever daughter of that some enormous Borough of Brooklyn, which gave the world such rockets as Clara Bow, Mae West, Peggy Wood and Sigrid Gurie.

Evelyn is the shining star of the big Ice Show at the International Casino, Broadway's most titanic night club. And civic pride in her is so violent that citizens nearly beat their tables to pieces when Evelyn does such skating tricks as her "Arabian Cartwheel," which is a complete somersault without touching the ice. Her partner is her husband, Bruce Mapes, who turned professional iceman when the depression knocked his profession of architecture to pieces. And they have two sons, Bruce, 12, and Jerry, 10, who also twist mean blades and made their skating debuts in Clevelan last summer.

Miss Chandler, or Mrs. Mapes, turned pro when Madison Square Garden hired her to amuse the customers between halves of hockey matches. Since then she and Bruce have taught, and have skated exhibitions all over the world. Right now she is winning plaudits right in the heart of her home town, on 1,400 square feet of artificial ice. And we New Yorkers, skate-crazy, are proud of our home town girl who has made good on Times Square. Take 50 bows, Evvy!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Mr. Isadore Fuss, who totes the mail up in the Bronx, is a very proud and happy papa these days. For his pretty blonde daughter, who bills herself as Evelyn Dall, sang a lot of hot swing for the King and Queen of England at the annual Derby Night Ball. "I hope she pleased the King and Queen," says the tickled Mr. Fuss between loads. "She's a good girl. Writes twice a week, and sends most of her pay home, too." Now we'd like a few words from George VI on the subject of Evelyn, "The Bronx Bombshell."

• • • •

I'm slightly more than appalled at the word that about 165,000 starry-eyed boys and girls are being graduated from the Nation's colleges this month. Jimminy, where are all the jobs to come from? Very few of that number, I'm sure, have nice comfy trust funds left by old Uncle Abner.

This column appears daily and Sunday.

YOUR FIGURE MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

ALARMING AS it may seem, your figure can change to a whole size larger even though you do not gain a pound in weight. This may be the reason you cannot squeeze into your last summer's favorite frock.

Keeping your figure at its perfect size is a matter of muscle tone as well as weight. Actually, well-toned muscle tissue weighs more than flabby tissue, but muscle tissue is compact and takes up little room and the flabby tissue is bulky and shapeless. And there is the explanation of the loss of your figure without a gain in weight.

A gain in measurements is particularly noticeable at the waist and hipline. The waistline settles and the hips spread. The gluteus maximus muscle, forming most of the buttocks, is very large, and when this portion of the figure becomes flabby there is an increase in the hip measurement. Even sitting for eight hours a day will not cause the hipline to spread as long as the musculature of the hips is kept in tone through exercise.

Exercise is the only means of improving the figure without a loss of weight. By tightening the musculature, it takes inches off the measurements. Outdoor play, the most enjoyable form of exercise, imparts additional tone to the muscles through exhilaration, and if we would swim, play handball, badminton or tennis, or get out and hike, we would not have to worry about measurements. They would be just naturally streamlined and lovely.

Any type of exercise that keeps you in condition will keep your figure trim, and walking is excellent for this purpose. While walking is not particularly reducing, it does tone the muscles and can make you look slimmer for your weight. The secret is to walk with an erect posture, the tummy muscles pulled up to slim the waist, and to automatically tuck the hips into line. Good posture affords constant exercise, but before you can hold an erect posture you may need corrective exercises to strengthen certain muscle groups.

As far as reducing the weight goes, exercise is a slow method. It burns few calories in comparison to the number it is possible to take into the body at one meal. But it is the speediest way of improving the figure, since it tones the muscles and improves the posture—both of which make you look slimmer.

The GENTLER SEX

'A Little Soap and Water.'

"Do you really think face creams do anything for you?"

"No, I'm clear off 'em. I think they're a complete waste of money."

"Everybody says there isn't anything in 'em—and then, look at what you have to pay!"

"I know. We're all suckers. You know what I've just about decided?"

"What?"

"That a little soap and water's all you need."

"I believe it's all in rest. I know I'm a different woman after I've had a good night's sleep."

"No, I tell you—being in love's the thing that does it! Look at Bess Marsh. She doesn't look like the same person since she's got her ring."

"Well, I still say soap and water's as good as anything. Look at Sally Goode. That's all she says she uses and she's got a perfectly marvelous skin."

"Well, I'm just going to build up from the inside from now on."

"Me, too. Of course, though, I've got an awfully dry skin and I think a little cream's a good thing at night—to sort of lubricate."

"Well, of course, I always use a cleansing cream—you've got to get the dirt out—but outside of that——"

"Well, I like a little astringent, too. But beyond that——"

"I'd never waste money on expensive creams. I say one's as good as another."

"That's what I told Marjorie Goofe today. I wish you could have seen the little jar of that new porcupine extract she bought. It's $20 a pound! She paid $5—$5 mind you—for a jar no taller than that!"

"Well, a fool and his money—what kind did you say it was?"

You know—that new porcupine cream everybody's talking about."

"I never heard of it."

"Oh, you have, too! They're talking about it EVERYWHERE. It's made from porcupine glands—or something. Some big Viennese doctor discovered it. Anyway, Marjorie says she knew a woman that used it three nights and nobody knew her."

"Now, you can't tell me——"

"I'm just telling you what Marjorie says. She swears it's true. She says you can't get near the demonstration booth downtown."

"Say, I wonder if that was the cream Barbara Jenks was raving about the other day? You put it on for 17 minutes every night——"

"That's the one! They say it's different someway from other creams—that this porcupine extract penetrates the pores and gives you a skin like a baby——"

"Has Marjorie tried it?"

"No, but she says the woman who was demonstrating it had the most beautiful skin she ever laid eyes on. She said this woman swore she was 57 and she didn't look a day over 35——"

"Say, where are they demonstrating it?"

"At Sailem's. And you know they're pretty reliable."

"Say, I believe I'll drop in and take a look at it. I'd like to see it—just out of curiosity."

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Nutritional Deficiency.

Doctors are likely to make fun of vitamins. I heard a doctor say the other day that he felt certain that vitamins would never be used by the medical profession were it not for the persistency of the publicity given them by drug firms. This, however, is not quite fair. More and more, vitamins are being recognized as factors in obscure disease.

Two vitamins, of course, are absolutely necessary in infant feeding—one, vitamin C, in the form of orange and tomato juice, and two, vitamin D, in the form of codliver oil or irradiated milk. Vitamin C prevents scurvy and vitamin D prevents rickets.

In middle and old age, it is becoming known that the body does not absorb vitamins as well as in young adult life. It must be remembered that although vitamins may be present in the diet, they may not be present in large enough quantities and digestive disturbances of some kind may prevent their absorption, so vitamin deficiency may be present even on a balanced diet.

Haden lists the following causes of vitamin deficiency: (1) Vomiting or diarrhea; (2) pregnancy and lactation; (3) impairment of absorption from the digestive tract on account of anemia, heart disease or the presence of certain substances, such as mineral oil in the intestines; (4) fever, alcoholism or excessive use of tobaco may impair the appetite enough to cause a vitamin deficiency.

An excess of starches and sugars in the diet may prevent utilization of vitamin B. It has been pointed out within the last year or two that vitamin B is likely to be insufficiently used by the body after the age of 50, and also that people of that age instinctively avoid foods which contain vitamin B.

The manufactured crystalline forms of the product are better absorbed and utilized than the natural product in the food. Vitamin B occurs in yeast and cereals; these are the common foods which contain the largest amount.

Middle-aged or elderly people are also likely to need vitamin D in artificial form. The brittle bones of the aged may be due to a deficiency of vitamin D in the diet.

Fashions Called Too Regimented By Instructor

The big fashion problem facing American women is to learn how to avoid regimentation in dress, believes Miss Ruth Hutton, instructor of fashion illustrating and costume designing at Cooper Union Art School, New York. American women fear to be individual because of what the next woman will say, declares Miss Hutton.

"It doesn't occur to the American woman to study herself as an individual," she says. "It is apparently easier to follow the fashion and the crowd, and, as far as clothes are concerned, most American women look alike.

"The style trend now is to be feminine, a trend applauded by men because they like to see women look like women. All women could use this trend to the fullest advantage if they would only follow the example of the Frenchwoman, who studies herself as an individual, evaluates her good and bad points, and then proceeds to make the most of herself.

"There is a real field for the intelligent American designer who will regard the American woman as an individual.

Cuban Navy Band Wins Applause At Embassy's Garden Party Concert

100 Members of Musical Unit Are Touring the United States; Dancing Follows Concert; Dr. Martinez Fraga and His Niece Receive.

By Elizabeth Ford.

Aided and abetted by a full moon (courtesy of the Weather Bureau) the party at the Cuban Embassy last evening scored another plus mark for the embassy's busy season of successful entertaining.

While the receiving line formed in the book-lined, red-carpeted library shortly after 8:30 o'clock, and the members of the Cuban Navy Band in their dark-blue coats and white trousers were ready to start with their concert promptly at 9, guests arriving fashionably late had not gathered until close to 9:45 for the musical program. It began with the Cuban National Anthem and the Star Spangled Banner, then swung into a march. After that, Massenet, Tschaikowsky and Wagner held the limelight until Senora Zoraida Marrero and Ernesto Romeu, son of the band's leader, concluded the musical proceedings with a medley of stirring Cuban songs.

Perfect Setting For Cuban Fete

Enthusiastic comments straying in from every side proved that the hospitable embassy on Sixteenth street with its large, deep garden still holds first place as society's favorite setting for outdoor events. Concealed bulbs placed in the trees, poured fountains of light up through the rich, green foliage of the leaves, and along the edges of the trim flower beds more lights played on the soft petals of hundreds of roses.

The buffet, staggering under everything from pink Virginia ham to crisp slices of chicken, was placed on the stone terrace that stretches behind the length of the building, just before one reaches the flight of stone steps that lead into the garden itself. Nearby champagne bubbled endlessly in frosty silver bowls.

Following the concert, the chairs were cleared away and the band played vivacious rhumbas and langorous tangos for dancing on the smooth wooden floor laid down a short time ago for another fiesta at the Embassy.

When the party was over, guests carried away with them not only the memories of a perfect evening, but unusual souvenirs in the form of folders printed in full color with the seal of the Republic of Cuba, pictures of the Cuban national and army flags and complete piano scores of its patriotic songs.

The band, the center of attraction of last evening's fete, is now on an extended tour of the United States. Two years ago, its 100 members won first prize in Philadelphia during the celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of Cavite, in honor of Admiral Dewey. The group arrived in Miami early this month and will remain in this country until early in August.

Ambassador Is Assisted by Niece

Receiving with the Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, were his niece, Senorita Ana Maria Carabia, who wore a peach-colored dress; the Cuban Military Attache, Major Felipe Munilla, who wore a white uniform covered with medals and gold braid; Senora de Munilla, who was in black net with a rhinestone belt; and Senora de Baron, the wife of the Minister Counselor, who wore a blue and pink print with a square neck and full skirt.

Among the early arrivals were the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Castillo Najera and Senora de Najera, who was gowned in green chiffon over lace. Others who came early, remaining to chat a moment with friends in the large anteroom on the first floor before going on to the garden were the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, she dressed in gray with a gay coat of Chinese red over her frock.

Still others were Mrs. Sol Bloom, who wore a black dress banded with taffeta, and her daughter, Miss Vera Bloom, who had chosen a dark print with a wide black hem for her costume. The Assistant Naval Attache of the Soviet Embassy, Capt. Nikolai Ivanovich Bolotnikov was also present, accompanied by Mme. Bolotnikov, whose dress of aqua crepe set off her dark hair and large brown eyes.

Also glimpsed among those at the party were the Spanish Ambassador's wife, Senora de los Rios, who wore black over which she had thrown a soft gray and black shawl, and her daughter, Senorita Laura de los Rios, in pale chartreuse. Glimpsed either in the garden or in the library were the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos; the Minister of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, and Senora de Alfaro; the former President of Panama, Ricardo Alfaro, and his wife; Baroness von Below, who wore a print dress of white and gray; Senora de Arcaya; Dr. Pedro de Alba, of the Pan American Union, and Senora de Alba; the Misses Patten; the Counselor of the Spanish Embassy, Dr. Enrique Carlos de la Casa, and Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, she in white lace.

Paris Envoy Plays Host To Alliance

Students Who Received Honors in French Also Guests.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Count de Saint Quentin, the Ambassador of France, yesterday afternoon entertained members of the Alliance Francaise of Washington at a garden party at the embassy. Additional guests were students who were recipients of awards from the Alliance for their proficiency in French.

The Ambassador received on the terrace back of the embassy, overlooking Rock Creek Park. Long buffet tables were set at either end of the lawn and the party continued out of doors until a brief shower sent the host and his guests inside. In the drawing room, where they lingered before making their adieus, were bouquets of madonna lilies, pink roses and carnations.

Alliance Officers Among the Guests

Officers of the Alliance present included the president of the Washington branch, Lynch Luquer; Mrs. John M. Biddle and N. H. Darton, vice presidents, and Mme. B. J. Bimont, corresponding secretary and treasurer. Mme. Bimont leaves later this month to spend the summer in France as she has done for the past 34 years. She expects to see the former Ambassador and Mme. de Laboulaye while she is there.

The Ambassador always serves as president of the Federation of de l'Alliance Francaise. Count de Saint Quentin was guest of honor at a meeting of the Washington Alliance soon after his arrival as envoy to this country, and has been much interested in its activities. Yesterday was the first occasion since his coming that the members had been entertained at the embassy. All of the embassy staff and their wives were present to welcome their fellow countrymen and the Americans who are affiliated with the organization because of their friendship for France and interest in the sister nation.

Among the Americans were Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, who resided in Paris many years. Mrs. Benet wore the decorations which she received for her work during the World War, among them that of an officer of the Legion of Honor. Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman also was among the guests, as were Mrs. Thomas H. Reed, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mrs. Henen Jennings, Mrs. William H. Johnston, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Baroness von Pagenhardt and Mrs. John C. Proctor.

Others in the company included Mrs. Carlos del Mar, Henry C. Morris, Mrs. Frederick G. Richards, Waldo E. Marion, Mrs. Randolph Dickens, Miss Fanny Boyce, Mrs. Arthur Chichester, Miss Blondelle Malone, Mrs. John B. O'Donnell, Mrs. Allen Nash, Mrs. H. R. Scudder, Mrs. W. A. Hayes, Dr. Pedro Arcaya, Mme. Octave Moussot, Mrs. Frances R. Hagner, Mrs. Thomas L. Gatch, Mrs. O. T. Simon, Miss Bessie Kibbey, Mrs. Franklin D. Nash, Mrs. C. Hoopaw, Miss Suzanne Pettengill, Mme. Tudela, Mrs. Francis Walker, Percival Rogers, Mrs. John Logan Strong and her daughters, Miss Solange Strong and Miss Sherley Ashton.

Many Student Awards Given

Students who received awards for their work in French and who were among the guests included: Joan Wilkinson and Helen Harris, of Madiera; Marylin Williams, of Central High School, and her brother, Richard Williams; Jacqueline Chevallaz, Western High School; Marion Wolberg, Roosevelt; Stephanie Pell, Madiera; Julia Cuniberti, Madiera; Mary Ingles and Carol Kennedy, Western High School; Elsie Fisher, McKinley; Louise Winfield and Virginia Perin, Paul Junior High School; Lawrence Fagg, Gordon Junior High; Stephen Graham, Woodrow Wilson, and John Ingles, Western.

St. Mary's Seniors Hear Mrs. Roberts

America is the land for great opportunities for women, Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, declared yesterday, addressing the graduates of historic St. Mary's Seminary. Mrs. Robert urged the young women to make the most of the many opportunities awaiting them in this country.

Princess du Sayn Wittgenstein of Poland, who is here visiting Judge and Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, was guest of honor yesterday afternoon at an open house given by the Newspaper Women's Club at the Admiral Hotel. Miss Katherine Brooks was hostess and the club president, Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, took time from her task of covering the wind-up of Congress, to welcome guests.

Active members of the club who assisted at the tea table were Josephine Tighe Williams, Mrs. Sallie V. H. Pickett, Mrs. Kate Scott Brooks, Sophie Kepner and Mrs. Samuel Wassell.

The table had as a centerpiece a bouquet of blue and red ragged robins in a green glass bowl and was lighted with green candles in holders of green glass.

Among guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Manger, Capt. and Mrs. Carl Ruth, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. George Waldenmeyer, Mrs. Perry S. Heath, who is leaving Saturday for her summer home in New England, and Miss Lillian Beverley Tabbs, granddaughter of Mrs. Pickett.

The club will have another open house next Monday afternoon at the tea hour with Jay Carmody as speaker.

Bedtime Stories

The Empty Nest

E'en though by emptiness 'tis blest,
There's sadness in an empty nest.
She had found the nest of Mrs.
Peter Rabbit.

Blest is the nest from which the children have gone out into the Great World. It has performed its duty. It sheltered them for as long as there was need. It is no longer of service. Yet there is a sadness about it even though no sorrow visited it during the time it was in use. One wonders about the young folk who left it to meet the dangers of the Great World, wonders how many of them have succeeded and what may have happened to the others.

Sue has found the nest of Mrs. Peter Rabbit and had peeped under the blanket of grass and fur at the six wee rabbits it covered. She had found that nest by accident and though she fairly ached to tell her brothers about it she kept the secret. She knew that Sammy would want to go straight over there, and that wouldn't do at all. Sammy wouldn't hurt those baby rabbits. No indeed! But Sammy would want to keep visiting that nest, and some enemy might see him or follow his trail, and discover those babies. So she didn't say a word about it to any one but her cousin, Farmer Brown's boy. She knew that Tommy already knew about it.

"Did you see Mrs. Peter?" asked Tommy.

Sue shook her head. "I looked everywhere for her, but I didn't see her. Do you suppose she was squatting in the grass somewhere near?" she replied.

In his turn Tommy shook his head. "She probably was over in the dear Old Briar Patch," said he.

"Oh, she couldn't have been so far away as that, Tommy. That nest is way out on the Green Meadows right in the grass without a bush or a tree near," cried Sue.

Tommy chuckled. "Wouldn't think of looking out there for her babies, would you?" said he.

"I certainly wouldn't," declared Sue.

"That is the way Mrs. Peter figures it, I guess," replied Tommy. "Mrs. Peter may not be as smart about some things as some others, but in the matter of hiding her babies she is smart enough to fool most people most of the time. So she made her nest way out there in the open where nobody would be likely to look for it."

"But how can she go to it without being seen? I've watched and watched from a distance, but I haven't seen her once," said Sue.

She had found the nest of Mrs. Peter Rabbit.

"She does her visiting after dark," replied Tommy. "This isn't the first nest of hers I have found, but I never have seen her visit her babies although I have watched."

It was a few days after this that Tommy suggested to Sue and Sammy a visit to the nest. "It is safe to do it now," he explained.

"How do you know?" asked Sue.

"The young rabbits have left it," replied Tommy.

"Have you been there again?" demanded Sammy.

"No," replied Tommy. "No, I haven't been there since I found it."

Sammy looked at his cousin suspiciously. "Then how do you know they have left it?" he wanted to know.

"I saw two of them in the Briar Patch this morning," replied Tommy. "Now if you want to see that nest you hunted for and couldn't find I'll show it to you, or Sue will."

Sammy looked from Tommy to Sue and back. "What does Sue know about it?" he demanded.

"She found it by accident," replied Tommy, and hurried on. "We'll go over there right away. Perhaps we may see the little rabbits somewhere. Anyway, you'll have a chance to see what a rabbit's nest is like."

He led the way and the others followed. So at length they came to the nest. Tommy removed the blanket of grass and fur. The nest was empty. Never again would it shelter baby rabbits. Sammy looked peeved. "I wanted to see those babies," he grumbled.

The next story: "Tommy Explains."

Madame Chairman

ELEANOR COX, daughter of Elizabeth M. Cox, attorney and counselor at law and vice president of the Zonta Club, is not following in her mother's footsteps—nor in those of her father, Henry Cox, also an attorney, Eleanor, with a definite gift in art, is devoting her time to sculpture.

An exhibition of her work will be held tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 6 at the Yard School of Art, 2000 S street. She is showing a plaster model of a sun dial for casting in bronze, a group of clay models in bas relief, designed for a garden wall to be enlarged in bronze; a child's head in clay and the head of a young woman in plaster.

She studied three years under Hans Schuler at the Corcoran School, where she was awarded first prize, and this year has been studying under William Marks Simpson. Mr. Schuler is director of Mount Royal School of the Maryland Institute and Mr. Simpson, director of the Rinehart School of Sculpture here.

The District of Columbia branch of the National League of American Pen Women, of which Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler is the newly elected president, has issued invitations for a founders' day tea, to be given Sunday afternoon, June 26, at the Martha Washington Seminary from 4 to 6 o'clock.

The league usually holds its parties in its studio at the Grafton Hotel but is having this one on the cool grounds of the seminary instead.

VACATION TIME and convention time are becoming synonymous for members of the various national and international sororities represented in Washington.

Delta Sigma Chapter of Sigma Phi Gamma international sorority held a beach party Saturday at the cottage of Mrs. Helen O'Brien and the coming convention at Estes Park, Colo., was the chief topic of conversation. Miss Peggy Conner, of Delta Sigma, will be nominated for the office of international secretary.

The Washington members of the sorority will depart for Estes Park, June 18, where the seventeenth annual convention will be held.

Those from here who will attend the convention: Miss Lila Sari, Gamma Rho; Mrs. Sophia Dampier, Delta Mu; Miss Connor, Miss Eleanor B. Johnson, Miss Mabel Zimmerman, Delta Sigma; Miss Marguerite Franklin, Miss Celia Minsker, Delta Chi; Miss June Beaver, Miss Jane Colbert, Epsilon Alpha; Mrs. Gertrude Johnson and Miss Evelyn Adams, Epsilon Pi.

THE MOTHERS' CLUB of the Chevy Chase Methodist Episcopal Church is having a dinner tomorrow night at Tilden Gardens. In former years the members have closed their season with a picnic at which husbands and children were entertained. The affair was fun for the families, but a little hard on mothers who made the preparations. This time husbands will stay home and take care of the children, while the mothers have a real party for themselves.

Women Urged For U. S. Posts

Women will be appointed to serve as district attorneys and assistant district attorneys in all the forty-eight States if the resolution passed by the Eastern central district of the National Association of Women Lawyers brings results.

Miss Helen McGerr, regional director of the district and a lawyer in the Department of Justice, presided at a luncheon conference held Sunday at 2400 Sixteenth street. It was attended by local women lawyers belonging to the State bars of Georgia, Arkansas, Nebraska, Kentucky, Mississippi, Maryland and Idaho as well as the District of Columbia.

Miss Alice Paul, internationally known feminist who has recently returned from Geneva, Switzerland; Miss Laura Berrien, vice president of the National Association of Women Lawyers; Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews, past president of the organization; Judge Annabel Matthews, president of the District of Columbia Women's Bar Association, and Miss Pearl McCall, former United States assistant district attorney for the District of Columbia, spoke briefly to the group.

D. C. Architect Is Beaux-Arts Award Winner

S. T. Stathes, Catholic U. Graduate, Awarded Paris Prize.

S. Thomas Stathes, Catholic University graduate and former employe of The Washington Post, was announced yesterday as the winner of the Paris Prize competition of the Society of Beaux-Arts Architects, the annual award most coveted by outstanding young architects.

The award carries with it $3,600 prize money to be used in two years of study at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris. After the announcement was made yesterday at a meeting of the Beaux Arts Institute of Design in New York, Stathes declared:

"All I can say is that I'm very happy to be the winner. I don't think I ought to gloat over it."

Stathes, a Washington boy, has been practicing in his own architectural office here at his home, 3114 Park place northwest. He set up offices and work rooms in the basement of his home and has been designing residences. The firm name is Duckett & Strathes.

Graduated in 1933.

A graduate of Catholic University Architectural School in 1933, Stathes has since been taking post-graduate work at the school and has also served as an instructor.

Son of an immigrant from Greece, an education was no easy attainment for the young architect. He worked several summer in the circulation department of The Post and, since his graduation, worked at the War Department and for several local architects before setting up his own firm. He is now 26.

Wins on Fifth Attempt.

The Washington youth's victory came on his fifth attempt—he had entered every contest since 1934. For some reason, perhaps for luck, he bet against himself this time, and so lost 25 cents to another student.

Besides his attempts for the Paris prize, Stathes has also entered competitions for the Rome Academy award.

The announcement yesterday followed three grueling 36-hour tests, taken in New York on consecutive week-ends. Ten finalists, weeded out in eliminations from among the best budding architects in the Nation, worked without sleep on three problems. The problems called for designs for a facade for an American Institute of Architects building in Washington, a theater to be erected as a memorial for a master of drama or music, and a motion picture studio. Designs submitted will be exhibited at the institute during June.

New Yorker Second.

Second in the competition was J. J. Caponnetto, of New York City, and third place was taken by E. A. Moulthrop, of the Cleveland School of Architecture. Only Stathes received a financial award.

Stathes will be entered in the senior class at the Paris School and will execute a minimum of ten designs. After that, he may remain at the school or may study in another European center.

Joseph H. Freedlander was chairman of the jury which decided the winners. Other on the jury were Lewis G. Adams, Harvey W. Corbett, Paul P. Cret, John W. Cross, William A. Delano, Frederic C. Hirons, John M. Howells, George A. Light, Alexander P. Morgan, James G. Rogers, William E. Shepherd, Seth Talcott, William Valalen and Whitney Warren.

Wife's 'Rival' Sees Landis Go to Trial

cutor Heflin said he would show how Landis prepared for the crime by manufacturing a sandbag at the fire boat station on Walter street southwest, where he was assigned to duty as a rookie.

He said the Government would further show that the youthful fireman drove to his wife's home at 2014 Monroe street northeast on the morning of March 24 and that they rode for several hours through Mount Rainier and Hyattsville, Md., returning to a lonely spot where the woman's unconscious form was later found.

Heflin said also he would produce witnesses to tell how Landis was placed under arrest when alert investigators discovered blood stains on his shirt collar and behind his ear.

Attorneys Russell Kelly and Jean Boardman, representing Landis, said they would prove that Mrs. Landis jumped from her husband's moving automobile and received the inuries described by Dr. Murphy.

Kelly was the lawyer who won freedom for Robert F. Langdon, former policeman, during his recent trial for the murder of Beulah Limerick.

Landis and his wife first met in 1935 while both were students at Tech High School. They were married the following year. According to Heflin's opening statement to the jury, Landis deserted his wife in August of 1937.

In the latter part of the same year, Heflin said, Landis met Miss Simpson, the nurse, and later gave her an engagement ring. After reading newspaper accounts of the crime, however, Miss Simpson returned the ring and went to her home in Atkinson, N. C.

Framework Is Raised for Summer Concert Shell

'Shell' Rushed For Symphony Sunset Music

Concerts to Be Given at Watergate Twice Weekly for Six Weeks.

With the beginning of construction of the rear wall and floor framing, work was well underway yesterday on the acoustical shell to be used by the National Symphony Orchestra in its "Sunset Symphony" series beginning July 10.

According to Otto J. Cass, deputy administrator of the District Works Progress Administration, the shell will be completed about July 8. Two 8-hour shifts of 20 carpenters, besides laborers and other workmen, are engaged in the building of the structure. The project is sponsored by the National Park Service, which is co-operating in the summer series.

Plans for the acoustical shell were drawn in the branch of plans and designs of the National Park Service and details of the construction were worked out by the service's branch of engineering. Among those in supervision of the project are C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent, National Capital Parks; Michael J. Cohan, director of operations, and Leon M. Grant, chief engineer of the WPA.

The concerts will be given at the Watergate near Lincoln Memorial every Sunday and Wednesday night for six weeks from July 10 to August 17. Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony will be musical director of the series and will conduct the concerts of July 10, 13 and August 17. The remainder will be directed by guest conductors including Willem van Hoogstraten, for 17 years conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony's stadium concerts, Rudolp Ganz, former conductor of the St. Louis Symphony, and Reginald Stewart, conductor of Toronto's famous Promenade concerts.

Bone Labels Radio Suit For $250,000 'Political'

965 Kentuckians Invite President To Help Barkley

Shelbyville, Ky., June 13 (AP).—President Roosevelt was invited to Kentucky tonight by a large group of Shelby County citizens.

Gilbert M. Veech, chairman of the Shelby County campaign committee, announced that the invitation, in the form of a petition signed by 965 Shelby countians, was sent the President and asked him to ignore a telegram sent the White House last week by a group of 50 other Shelby County residents.

The telegram last Friday suggested that the President not come to Kentucky and was signed by a group headed by W. T. Baker, Shelby County campaign manager for Gov. Chandler, who is opposing Senate Majority Leader Barkley for the Democratic senatorial nomination in the August primary. The Baker telegram asked the President not to interfere in the State primary.

was opposed by Representative Brewster, of Maine, a member of the District Committee, who argued continued exceptions to the zoning law would interfere with orderly development of the city.

The conference report on the taxicab liability insurance bill, which came up after passage of the other eight measures, was stopped by the parliamentary strategy of Representative O'Malley, of Wisconsin, who forced a quorum call prior to fighting the proposal.

Cab Insurance Dead.

O'Malley said the insurance plan requiring a policy for each individual cab would operate against organized cab drivers. He declared he had been asked by organized labor to oppose the measure and added, "that is enough for me. The boys ought to know what they want."

Representative Shulte, of Indiana, also voiced opposition to the measure on the ground it would throw 1,000 cab drivers on relief.

In killing the conference report the House stuck to its original plan of permitting cab fleet operators to take out separate or blanket policies on their cars. No further effort to revive the measure before end of the session is expected.

Three ADA Objectives.

The bill amending the Alley Dwelling Authority act had three major objectives:

To clear the way for the authority to accept an offer by Nathan Straus, head of the United States Housing Authority, to lend from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 for low-rent housing developments such as are in operation elsewhere.

To authorize the Treasury to loan the ADA $1,000,000 a year for five years to allow the agency to carry forward its own program of slum clearance, with the debt to be retired by fixed rents.

To enable the ADA to acquire land for erection of houses for families equal in number to those whose dwellings are demolished in squares not adapted to low-rent housing.

WPA Items Approved.

New items inserted in the last deficiency bill by the Senate Appropriations Committee include:

Health Department expenses, $2,612.

Expenses of the new Lunacy Commission, $14,820.

Additional amount for expenses of the Juvenile Court, $45,900.

Municipal Court salaries, $8,300; judgments, $5,725; printing and contingent expenses, $4,000.

The committee also approved without change House items of $189,000 for the District's contribution to WPA projects and $154,720 to establish two stations for the annual inspection of motor vehicles, beginning next year.

The Senate measure includes the Budget Bureau's recommendation of $4,500,000 for administrative purposes of the United States Housing Authority, which will save the jobs of 500 employes in Washington and the field.

Two Schools Appear Safe.

Loss of the jobs was threatened by House action in reducing funds for the Housing Administration to $2,250,000.

If the Senate sustains the committee, as expected, the item will go to conference.

The committee failed to include $1,000,000 for the ADA because legislation passed by the House yesterday will permit the agency to borrow from the Treasury.

By consenting to District items already allowed by the House the group virtually assured continuance of the National Training School for Girls and the Children's Receiving Home. Until the dificiency bill was drafted these agencies were in danger of being closed on July 1 and January 1, respectively, under provisions of the 1939 District appropriations act.

Ihlder Ready to Act.

John Ihlder, head of the Alley Dwelling Authority, announced himself as "naturally gratified" by admendment of the original alley dwelling act. "This is the successful culmination of nearly two years of effort," he said.

Ihlder said that as soon as the authority learns that the President has signed the bill it will call a meeting to formulate a program designed in accordance with the new provisions of the law.

Woman Confesses DuPont Forgery

New York, June 13 (AP).—Mrs. Muriel Bergman pleaded guilty in general sessions court today to a forgery by which she obtained $12,000 posing as a daughter of the late Gen. T. Coleman duPont, once United States Senator from Delaware. She will be sentenced June 27.

Mrs. Bergman was arrested in Portland, Oreg., on complaint of Frank Seitz and his wife, Marie, who said they gave her their life savings after they took her, destitute, into their home in 1931. She lived there six years.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Tender and touching have been the good-byes uttered among Members of Congress and their wives this week. At least a hundred are extremely uncertain whether they will be among those present when the Seventy-sixth Congress convenes next January.

Mr. Garner . . . stimulant?

This uncertainty is doubly harassing for the wives. Many of them have become enamored of the Capital's glamour. Others are perplexed about more mundane affairs, such as Junior's schooling or the housing problem.

* * * *

A few console themselves that the old home town will be restful after a fling at Washington's fleshpots . . . And at home a former Congressman's wife is apt to be unique, which a Congressman's wife isn't, in the Capital.

"—a symbol of normalcy."

Quite a few fearful, unhappy businessmen take heart at the purely casual talk of Vice President Garner as a possibility for the Presidency in 1940. He has become a symbol of dear old normalcy. They have forgotten what they were saying of the cherubic Texan in 1932.

"If Garner were even nominated," said one employer of several thousand, "the wave of confidence would be so strong that four or five million jobs would be created overnight."

* * * *

Among business men, the social security taxes are increasingly a target of criticism, when they invade Washington warily for a closeup.

"Why," said one, "should we tax ourselves so heavily when the national income is only 60 millions, for the sake of benefits to be paid in that glorious era which is approaching, so the New Dealers tell us, when the national income will be 90 billions?"

* * * *

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: An old lady almost wowed the British Embassy last week. She not only asked Lady Lindsay to let her come to the second, or swankier, of the British garden parties celebrating King George's birthday, but also requested that her husband's name be left off the invitation, as he had died not long ago and she wanted to bring another friend.

The Ambassador's wife graciously made both concessions.

Visitors from the hinterland take fright easily at Washington's teeming taxicabs, which wheel and circle so dashingly in pursuit of passengers.

"I understand now why Washington streetcars travel in squads, even out in the suburbs," said a hinterlander. "It's because they're afraid of the taxicabs."

* * * *

When Tommy Corcoran's name came up at a White House press conference for the first time this year—the question was about Mr. Corcoran's political functions—President Roosevelt laughed it off. Tommy, he intimated, has been used as a bogeyman.

Actually, the secret of Tommy's great prestige, divested of legend and fairy-tale, is that he works 16 hours a day in a town where 6 hours is nearer the normal work day.

"—she thought he was Chinese."

At an exclusive Washington club a slightly exhilarated young woman espied a young Jap at a nearby table.

"You remind me of a young Chinaman I used to know," she said. (Japs, Chinese, Filipinos and Siamese are often confused by good Americans to whom most Orientals look alike.)

"I am very flattered!" said the Jap, bowing politely, very low.

* * * *

In the light of the rumored "ransoming" of Sigmund Freud and Baron Rothschild from the Nazis, a new interpretation of the cryptic "O. K. Hitler" in the the New York Times personals last week has been advanced. The new theory is that the phrase was not a spy message, but a kidnap signal: The money is ready.

Perhaps it's just a prank or a publicity stunt.

* * * *

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Two-word description of the Washington atmosphere: Transient provincialism . . . Two young statesmen who returned from a Western flight are complaining that pilots are banking too quickly after taking off, too sharply and too low . . . The best hors-d'ouvres I've tasted here are miniature hamburger sandwiches, just one mouthful . . . Amid all the caviar a Westerner never gets over his weakness for hamburgers.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 13.—The Rev. Kendall B. Shoffner was installed as pastor of St. James' Evangelical and Reformed Church at Lovettsville, Va., Sunday evening by Dr. A. M. Gluck, this city, under authority from Virginia Classis, which approved the call of the pastor at a recent meeting.

Post Staff Photos.

Truckin', peckin', shaggin' and the Big Apple to the strains of a swing orchestra occupied some 250 young couples for two hours last night in the season's first street dance on the Ellipse under auspices of the National Capital Parks. Left—Nora Lane, 937 Twenty-third street northwest, and Robert Hendrick, 654 E street southeast, peck awhile. Two girls (center) who preferred to remain anonymous, demonstrate that lack of boys is no handicap. Right—Florence Bucker, 4521 Forty-ninth street northwest, and George Aredes, 247 Sixteenth street southeast, give close attention to their fun.

Eight Complete Courses in Teaching and 200 Win Certificates.

With the awarding of diplomas and certificates as a feature, the twentieth annual convocation of the American Home Bible Institute and the Washington School of the Bible was held last night at Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church.

Standard training course diplomas were presented to Helen Fowler, Betty La Roche, Leon Owen and Ruth E. Robinson, and teachers certificates were given Mary A. Hervey, Ruth M. Howe, Margaret Iseley and Lena B. Lobaugh. Over 200 students' certificates were awarded.

The principal speaker was George T. B. Davis, secretary of the Million Testament Campaign. Others who participated in the program were the Rev. C. W. Oyer, president of the Washington School of the Bible; the Rev. James King, pastor of the Cherrydale Baptist Church; Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, Wallace pastor, and George Miles, president of the American Bible Institute.

Special music was furnished by the Bible school quartette and Miss Effie A. Collamore, daughter of the founder of the institute, Edward Collamore.

The organizations are sponsoring "prophetic conference meetings" today at the United Brethren Church at North Capitol and R streets northwest, at 2:30 and 8 p. m.

Rites Set Today For C. A. Edwards

Funeral services for Charles A. Edwards, of 3541 Tenth street northwest, will be held at 10:30 a. m. today at Hines' funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. He will be buried in Shiloh (Va.) Church Cemetery at 2 p. m.

Mr. Edwards, who was 46, died Sunday after he was struck by a streetcar at Fourteenth and W streets northwest.

A native of Shiloh, Mr. Edwards had lived in Washington for a quarter century. He was a representative of the Home Beneficial Association.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Janie F. Edwards, of Shilor and Washington; his wife, Mrs. Dora Burton Edwards; two daughters, Mrs. Eleanor Reid and Miss Virginia Edwards, and two grandchildren of this city; four sisters, Miss Nancy Edwards, of Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. Sadie B. Jones, of Washington; Mrs. T. N. Billingsley, of Indianhead, Md., and Mrs. G. A. Motherhead, of Shiloh; four brothers, John F. and George A., of Shiloh, and Ray F. and Ralph P. Edwards, of Washington.

34 Are Graduated At St. Michael's

Thirty-four pupils yesterday received certificates of graduation at the fifth annual commencement of St. Michael's School held in the school auditorium. The Rev. T. A. Calnan, of St. Michael's Catholic Church, who presided, announced that a second story is to be built this summer on the present building.

Honors were conferred by Father Calnan, assisted by the Rev. John Czyz. They included the American Legion citizenship medal, won by Paul Casey; the Forest Glen Knights of Columbus prizes awarded to Patricia Glenn and Rosemary Kennedy; the Father Calnan prize for excellence in religion, won by Eleanor Giusta; a prize for the highest average to Rosemary Kennedy, a prize for second highest average to Jane Barry and the award for the best notebook on religion to James Clements.

It was announced that Eleanor Giusta and Robert Flanigan had won scholarships to the Academy of the Holy Name. The program included selections by the school band, a poem by Dorothy Lowd and the address of welcome by Lloyd Clark.

Flag Day Rites Slated Tonight At the Capitol

G.A.R. Auxiliary, Daughter of Union Veterans Are Among Sponsors.

Flag Day exrcises, marking the 161st anniversary of the adoption of the American Flag, will be sponsored by the Women's Relief Corps, auxiliary of the Grand Army of the Republic, tonight at the east front of the Capitol.

Assisting the sponsors will be the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, the Gold Star Mothers, the auxiliary of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, the auxiliary of the United Spanish War Veterans, the American War Mothers, the American Legion Auxiliary and the auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The invocation will be by Col. Alva J. Braisted and John M. Cline, department commander of the G. A. R., will be introduced by Everett F. Warner, his assistant. Mrs. Bertha B. Brown, department president of the Women's Relief Corps, will extend greetings to the audience and colors will be presented by Percy Parker, G. A. R. colorbearer, Mrs. E. Genevieve Craig, department patriotic instructor of the relief corps, will give the oath of allegiance to the Flag.

Flags representing the original 13 colonies will be carried onto the rostrum by 13 Boy Scouts. A pageant, 'Defenders of the Nation," will be performed by soldiers, sailors and marines from Washington organizations. Representative Harold Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, will deliver the principal address. The benediction will be by the Rev. Howard Snyder, chaplain of District war veterans.

Mrs. Katherine Warren will sing the "Star-Spangled Banner," accompanied by the United States Army Band. The pageant and drama were directed by Mrs. Marie Forrest, director of pageantry and drama of the District public schools.

The committee on arrangements includes Mrs. Delia L. O'Brien, chairman; Mrs. Mary C. Bowen and Mrs. E. Helen Temple.

Paul Junior High Student Missing

Washington police have been asked to look for John Arthur Hyman, 13, a Paul Junior High School student, who has been missing from his home at 5009 Seventh street northwest since Saturday. His mother, Mrs. Gertrude Hyman, said he was last seen Saturday at 8 p. m. when he left home to collect on a newspaper route he carried.

Mrs. Hyman said her son "was not the type" to run away from home and that he had stood exceptionally well in school. She said, however, that he had told some of his friends he would like to go South.

He was described as about 4 feet 10 inches tall, 96 pounds, with dark hair and brown eyes. When last seen, he was wearing white duck trousers, a blue polo shirt, white shoes and a dark gray sweater.

Funeral Set Today For Hume Duvall, 72

Services for Hume Duvall, 72, will be held at 12:30 p. m. today at the S. H. Hines Co. funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. The Rev. Paul D. Wilbur will officiate. Burial is to be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Duvall, who died Sunday at his home, 3232 Walbridge place northwest, was a native of Prince Georges County, Md., and had lived in Washington over 55 years. He was a ticket examiner at Washington Terminal until his retirement last September.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eliza S. Duvall; a brother, Walter Duvall, of Baltimore, and a sister, Mrs. Maude Stone, of Roanoke, Va.

250 Couples Dance on Ellipse At First Parks Street Party

The young couples danced in the street last night—some 250 of them—while a moon that looked like a golden big apple with a dent in it slanted its rays past the Washington Monument, through the heavy elm foliage and down to a roped-off area on the south side of the Ellipse.

That golden "big apple" might have been the emblem for the dance—the first public street dance of the season—held under the sponsorship of the National Capital Parks on the Ellipse roadway between Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets northwest.

For the young couples, following the swing music of Bob Merchant's District WPA Orchestra, big-applied and shagged, trucked and pecked, for two hours of the cool evening.

Most favored of the tunes played, Merchant said, were "Something Tells Me," "Snake Charmer" and "That's A-Plenty." In deference to the youthfulness of the dancers, he explained, his orchestra, seated in a rambling theater truck, played only swing tunes, no waltzes.

While most of the couples were of high-school age, there were a few older persons among the dancers. Girls seemed to be most interested in the music, often pairing off until a coupe of stags "cut in." The crowd was well behaved and Sergt. J. C. Statts, in charge of a Park Police detail, experienced his only difficulty in kepeing the eager "jitterbugs" away from the platform and proximity to the blaring horns.

Circus Rider Weds Holy Cross Pupil

Tommy Autry, 22, who has been crooning at a Washington night club since Col. Tim McCoy's Wild West Show left him afoot here, was married yesterday at Elkton, Md., to Edna M. O'Rourke, 20, recent graduate of Holy Cross Academy.

Tommy, who used to ride a white horse at the head of Col. Tim's parades, was sitting with his bride-to-be on the courthouse steps when the license bureau opened. A few minutes later, armed with the necessary credentials, they were married by the Rev. C. M. Cope.

Autry gave his address as 1901 Fourteenth street northwest and his bride said she lived at 937 J street northwest. They left by automobile for an unannounced destination.

Mrs. Melnicove, 76, Ill 4 Years, Is Dead

Mrs. Rachel Melnicove, a resident of Washington for 55 years and for 35 years proprietor of a lace business in the old Center Market, died at Washington Sanitarium yesterday after a four-year illness. She was 76.

Born in Russia, Mrs. Melnicove came to the United States when a girl of 18. Before coming to Washington, she lived for a time in Philadelphia, where she learned the lace business.

Mrs. Melnicove, a member of Rebecca Lodge, lived at 3521 Sixteenth street northwest.

Surviving are her husband, Jacob Melnicove, retired tin merchant; a daughter, Mrs. Joseph Ottenberg; two grandsons, Dr. Gilbert Ottenberg and Melvin Ottenberg, and three great-grandchildren, all of Washington.

Catholic School Alumni Install 22

The National Alumni Association of the National Catholic School of Social Service last night installed 22 new members at a reception and dinner at the Manor Country Club. The Rev. Lucian Lauerman, director of the social service school, connected with Catholic University, was principal speaker and Miss Olive Gage, president of the alumni association, presided.

Graduates will receive diplomas today at the school, the Right Rev. Mgr. Thomas O'Dwyer, director of the Catholic Charities Bureau of Los Angeles, making the commencement address. Diplomas will be presented by the Right Rev. Thomas J. McNamara, auxiliary Bishop of the Archdiocese of Baltimore.

Funeral Set Today For Mrs. Blanchard

Funeral services for Mrs. Shelley Thomas Blanchard, 36, who died Sunday will be held at Lewis Memorial Church, Third and Hamilton streets northwest, at 2 p. m. today. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Mrs. Blanchard, who was employed in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, was the wife of Samuel A. Blanchard. Her home was at 245 Gallatin street northwest.

She was born in Burlington, N. C., and came to Washington 20 years ago. Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Samuel A. Blanchard, jr.; her mother, Mrs. Mary W. Thomas, and three sisters, Mrs. F. A. Rudolph, Mrs. J. S. Howell and Mrs. Marcus Powell, all of Washington.

Chest Will Let Contributors Pick Recipients

By-Laws Changed to Allow Designation of Agency to Be Aided.

Contributors to the Community Chest next fall will be able to choose the agencies to which their contributions will go. The board of trustees, meeting yesterday at the United States Chamber of Commerce, voted to change the by-laws to make such designations possible.

Under the new plan the budget committee will budget each agency before the campaign and each contributor will be supplied with a pledge card and a list of agencies. He will be asked to write on the back of the card the agencies to which he wishes to contribute, not more than 50 per cent of his gift to go to any one agency.

The change was sponsored by William J. Flather, campaign chairman, and was adopted after long discussion. Herbert L. Willett, jr., director, said he hoped most contributors still would make a community gift, leaving distribution to the budget committee.

President Coleman Jennings, in his report, said the executive committee has authorized Chest officials and staff to co-operate with the Better Business Bureau in eliminating charity rackets from Washington. The Better Business Bureau, he said, has written to other cities for information on effective procedure.

Mrs. Mary Egan, 81, To Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Egan, 81, who died Sunday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary F. Tierney, 1317 Delafield place northwest, will be held at 9 a. m. today in St. Gabriel's Church, 22 Grant circle northwest. Burial will be in Mt. Olivet Cemetery.

Mrs. Egan was the widow of Michael Egan, former superintendent of the Union Pacific Railroad, and the mother-in-law of Damon Runyon, newspaper columnist.

Besides her daughter, she is survived by two sons, Michael Francis and James Morris Egan, both of Denver; two granddaughters, Mrs. Howard F. Ralph, of Washington, and Mrs. Richard McCann, of New York City, and two grandsons, Damon Runyon, jr., Akron, Ohio, and John J. Tierney, of this city.

Sen. Radcliffe Proposes Goldsborough as Judge

By the Associated Press.

Senator Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, said yesterday he had advocated in a conversation with Marvin McIntyre, a Presidential secretary, the appointment of Representative Goldsborough (Democrat), of Maryland, to the recently created Federal district judgeship for Maryland.

Monday Club Ends Baseball At Dusk in 3d

Public Welfare Workers Leading Privates in Weird Game, 14-11.

Baseball history was made by the Monday Evening Club at its annual picnic yesterday when the game between teams representing private and public welfare work was called in the third inning on account of darkness with the score at 14 to 11 for the public team. Judge Edward M. Curran of Police Court served as umpire while the public team was captained by Clarence L. Geiger, chief deportation agent, Board of Public Welfare, and the private team by Herbert E. Willett, executive director of the Community Chest.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken of the Metropolitan Police Department, was inducted as the new president. Other officers inducted were Edgar M. Gerlach, supervisor of social service, Federal Bureau of Prisons, first vice president; Dr. Emma Winslow, director of statistics, Children's Bureau, second vice president; Carroll Robb, of the Board of Public Welfare, secretary, and Otto Cass, deputy WPA commissioner for the District, treasurer.

A gavel was presented to William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, retiring president. Music was furnished by an orchestra furnished by the District WPA.

Court Sets Aside Verdict In Virginia Murder Case

Powhatan Courthouse, June 13 (AP).—Judge Garland Jefferson, in Powhatan Circuit Court, today set aside a verdict of 40 years' imprisonment given a colored man tried under the name of Albert Finney, for the murder of Finney's wife, Nellie.

The man, contending that he was not Albert Finney, but John Henry Warren, won a new trial on the grounds of newly discovered evidence.

Airport Bill Delayed by Inquiry Move

Rep. Scott Asks Joint Senate-House Quiz on Camp Springs.

Efforts to push through Congress legislation establishing a District airport at Camp Springs, Md., were temporarily stymied yesterday when Representative Byron Scott (Democrat), of California, introduced a joint resolution to investigate the matter.

Under his resolution a 10-man joint committee, consisting of five each from the House of Representatives and the Senate, would be set up. This committee would be authorized to subpena all records in the project and to subpena witnesses.

8 Questions Listed.

Eight questions specified for investigation are:

Lobbying for the Camp Springs bill.

Methods of procuring options by Federal agents and agencies in the area.

Extent of profit likely to accure to real estate and other private interests.

Attitude of commercial airlines to the site.

Views of Federal departments to the site.

Other Sites Included.

The resolution, which was referred to the Rules Committee, provided the committe may extend its inquiry "along similar lines to include other proposed airports and airport sites in and near the District of Columbia.

Meanwhile, Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, vice president and general manager of Eastern Air Lines, said his firm would be forced to discontinue its present shuttle service between Washington and New York should Washington Airport be abandoned. Value of the service, he said, would be lost if the local airport were moved farther from downtown Washington.

Lauds Washington-Hoover Field.

"Of course we won't eliminate the 'merry-go-round' because we want to or out of spite. Eastern Air Lines wants and needs business as much as anybody else. In fact, if Washington-Hoover Airport was decided upon and expanded to it full possibilities, we would be in position to increase our schedules between New York and Washington to 25 round trips a day.

"But aviation just can't fight the handicaps of being removed from the close proximity of commercial centers."

He said Washington-Hoover Airport "can be made one of the best airports in America."

18 THE WASHINGTON POST: TUESDAY, JUNE 14, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

"Down In Front" makes its appearance today on the sports pages of The Post. Down in front means exactly what it implies. It means the front row at the big fights. It means within whispering distance of the champion as he holes the last putt to win the National Open. It means the press boxes at the Davis Cup matches, the track meets, the World Series and the football games.

POVICH.

It means down in front when championships change hands, when new figures catapult across the sports scene, when reigning title holders beat off challengers. It means down in front of the roar of the mobs.

"Down In Front" is authored by Richards Vidmer who writes out of New York, but who is a Washington boy whom The Post has contrived to give a Washington audience. You ought to know Richards Vidmer, former George Washington football star, World War aviator, and ace New York commentator who writes of sports for The Post starting today.

* * * *

As the twig is bent the tree is supposed to grow, and in the case of Richards Vidmer it has worked out that way. No accident was it that Vidmer blossomed as a sports writer. His earliest interest was sports. At 10, his passion was the collection of pictures of athletic heroes circulated by cigarette companies in their packs. Proud of his scrapbook was young Vidmer a 10-year-old citizen of El Paso, but not too proud to approach a cigarette smoker and say:

"Mister, will ya let me have the picture that came in your cigarettes?"

His heroes then were Ty Cobb, Ted Meredith and Jim Jeffries. A Ty Cobb photo was worth two of a Meredith or a Jeffries, according to the neighborhood market, and young Vidmer's scrapbook was the envy of the kids 'round about.

* * * *

But Col. George Vidmer, U. S. Army, father of young Dick, frowned upon young Dick's consuming interest in sports. "It won't get you anywhere," he counseled. after young Vidmer had taken down all honors as a high school athlete. "Go out and get a job. Anything. Make $10 a week and I'll be satisfied."

Young Vidmer got the job. His father had said "anything," he remembered. So at $10 a week he signed to play third base for the El Paso semi-pros. Col. Vidmer resigned himself, eventually, to the fact that his young son was bound up in sports.

There was only one flaw for young Dick Vidmer. Starring for the El Paso Club, he was getting scant credit. Invariably the name was printed in the Texas papers as "Widdemeyer." That irked the lad, he sought out Hy Schneider, sports editor of the El Paso Herald, explained that his name was Vidmer.

"I know that, son," said Sports Editor Schneider, "but you ought to be thanking me for misspelling it. Some day you're going to be a great college athlete and if they knew you were taking dough for playing here you'd be barred. See?"

Vidmer saw.

* * * *

At 12, Dick Vidmer had been at West Point. He was the mascot of West Point's football team. That was natural, for young Dick, as we were saying, was the son of Col. George Vidmer, an important figure at West Point on the Hudson.

Eventually, and naturally, Dick Vidmer found himself a plebe at West Point. That was 1917. But he was an impatient fellow and when war was declared he ached for action. He resigned at West Point, became a cadet in the aviation service. At Keelley Field in Texas he earned his wings. At Hazelhurst, now Curtis Field, in New York, he was assigned as an instructor in flying.

That's where he got his broken leg. It was optional flying weather when he took a young cadet into the air for instruction. That meant that instructors and cadets flew at their own risk. Instructor Vidmer told the cadet to set the plane down despite the fog. The lad overshot his mark, missed the field and was forced to give the ship the gun in an attempt to get it back in the air.

* * * *

Then Vidmer took the controls, started for home. On second thought, he turned back. This was doing the cadet no good, he reasoned. The plane could be set down despite the fog, he would show his young pupil. From 4,000 feet he descended toward the field. At 1,200 feet it happened. Crash! and another plane with the same objective rammed into his tail.

Two occupants in the second plane were killed in the crash. Vidmer's young pupil was killed. Of the quartet, Vidmer alone survived. He was carted off in an ambulance with a leg broken and himself unconscious.

Disabled, he was given his discharge from the Army, but not before he incurred the official U. S. Army wrath for his stunt flying beneath an arch on Pennsylvania avenue at the time of the homecoming parade of the First Division in 1919.

Out of the Army, Vidmer was receptive to an offer to play football for George Washington University. Board, tuition and his books was his price and he got it. In 1920, he served on the George Washington varsity, quit to take a job with the Washington Daily News. He wanted to be closer to his heroes in the big leagues.

The New York Times beckoned him in 1923. The New York Telegraph stole him from the Times in 1926. The same year his trenchant pen and fluent style gained him a contract with the New York Herald Tribune. At the death of George Daily, sports editor, he inherited the title and the work of the Herald Trib's sports columnist.

Keep That Left Up, Joe

Louis' Left Has Respect Of Kanner

Tall, 'Dark-Eyed' Gent Returns Home; Says Joe Can Hit.

A tall gent with dark eyes crossed our path last night. It was Murray Kanner, until Sunday a Joe Louis sparring partner, who has returned to his native haunts after two weeks in the champion's training camp.

Murray's been tall since he reached the ripe old age of 15 years, but didn't acquire the dark optics until he met up with Louis and his left jab. He also brought back a bashed-in nose, but got a "world of experience."

It was a tribute to Kanner's ability that we recognized him at all after he boxed 15 rounds with Louis. He was the youngest and greenest kid in camp, but had the distinction of giving the titleholder some of his best workouts. He worried Louis with a long left jab, particularly, but got in a few stiff rights that didn't add to his popularity.

Murray enjoyed his stay at Pompton Lakes after his first day, when he was nervous and managed to get knocked down by a short right hook that traveled the length of your thumb.

"He really let me have it that time," he said, recalling the blow. "But most of the time I think Joe was holding back. He was easy with most of the sparring partners, that is all but Dean, and I think he had it in for him. He cut his lip badly one day, and the first time they boxed after it healed, he let him have it again. He was really rough with that guy, but sort of coasted with us."

Kanner says Joe can hit with either hand, and he knows because he hit him. But he hesitated about picking the winner of the big fight. After all he hasn't seen Schmeling work, and if he hits as hard as Louis did the big show is liable to wind up with a double-knockout. That would be a finish.

Abrams Seeks New Ring Style For Battle With Furr June 20

By Lewis F. Atchison.

George Abrams, whose boxing style changes as often as Washington weather, is working on a new pattern for use Monday night when he crosses rights with Phil Furr at the baseball yard. Exactly what the youngster's plan of battle will be Manager Syd Fishel refuses to reveal, excepting that as far as Furr is concerned "he'll get a good look at the proper time—right in the eye."

Fishel also is author of the statement that Abrams is going to knock the aforementioned Furr person flatter than a 1910 auto tire when he uncorks his kayo punch. Fishel has been playing that record so long he's beginning to believe it. But you can't stop a guy from dreaming—especially a nice fellow like Fishel, and, who knows, some day he may be right.

Abrams may have a horseshoe up his glove. Better fighters than he have used them, and they're said to bring the bearer lots of good luck in the ring.

Abrams in Shape.

George will be well prepared for the evening's business when he steps in the ring Monday—better prepared than he was for Teddy Yarosz, and it's a good omen. He waged the best battle of his young career against the former titleholder, and if he has as much on the ball in this fight he'll win going away.

Certain fight fans who hold the opinion that Abrams fought over his head against Yarosz, inspired by the fact that his opponent once held the crown he hopes to wear some day. They believe the lad will have his feet on terra firma against Furr because of the let-up which inevitably follows an important fight. And any let-up against a man of Furr's caliber, they point out, easily can be fatal.

Furr a Test?

And there are those who believe Furr punches too straight and hard for George's rather loose defense, and that sooner or later he'll drive home a straight right to the jaw, chilling Abrams' middleweight hopes.

They think Furr is more of a test for the boy than was Yarosz—and from the writer's viewpoint that has all the best of that argument. In fairness to Abrams, however, it must be noted that he made Yarosz fight the way George wanted him to, and threw too much leather for the veteran Pittsburgher.

Abrams' supporters think he's going to toss a lot of leather Monday night, more than he heaved at Yarosz, and that Furr will be too busy ducking to plan any counter-attack. They point to Furr's recently healed flipper (it was a sprained right wrist) and say he'll break it again if he ever gets the chance to use it. And as for Furr being in Yarosz's class even though the latter has gone back a ways, why, to them such statements are heresy.

Abrams at this time, let us point out, is running slightly ahead in wagering. At this time they're quoting him a 6-5 choice. It's an odds-on bet the fight is a good one.

Seabiscuit Is Sent To Suffolk Downs; May Meet Admiral

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 13.—Suffolk Downs officials tonight announced that Charles S. Howard's thoroughbred, Seabiscuit, would arrive at the track tomorrow morning from New York, making possible a meeting with War Admiral in the $50,000 Massachusetts Handicap on June 29.

With War Admiral definitely committed to start—he arrives here on Wednesday—track officials said that Seabiscuit's trainer, Tom Smith, had advised them a car had been ordered to transport the Biscuit here, arriving at 9 a. m., tomorrow.

Howard recently withdrew Seabiscuit from a $100,000 match race with the Admiral at Belmont Park, New York, because of his horse's poor condition. Apparently the Biscuit had recovered speedily, because the trainer said he would start in an overnight race some time before the $50,000 handicap.

Seabiscuit won the $50,000 race last year, while War Admiral has never run in New England.

Pat Page Quits.

Down Through the Heavyweights

Burns Wins Over Hart, Succeeded by Johnson

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Tex Rickard and elimination tournaments had yet to appear on the fistic horizon when Jeffries ripped the tar-tape from his knuckles and retired. But the forerunner of tourney champions appeared in the person of Marvin Hart, who claimed the vacated title after flattening Jack Root in 12 rounds at Reno, Nev., on 1905.

Jeffries refereed the match, and although he later protested the statement that he sanctioned "giving away" the crown, he added weight to Hart's claim by presenting him with the championship belt. Complications followed when Philadelphia Jack O'Brien filed a claim for the title. O'Brien held the light-heavyweight crown, knocking out Fritzsimmons in 1905, and was anxious to win a "double."

Meanwhile, Noah Brusso, a legitimate light-heavy campaigning under the name of Tommy Burns, emerged from his native Canada to join in the free-for-all, and wielded a potent influence in clarifying the muddled situation. He won a 20-round decision from Hart at Los Angeles in 1906, in a bout recognized as for the title. The following year he took on O'Brien at Los Angeles and, in 20 rounds, cooled off his heavyweight ambitions.

Burns retained his laurels until the fateful year of 1908 when the ponderous, ebony-hued frame of Jack Johnson edged into the championship picture at Sydney, Australia. The Negro camped on Burns' trail two years trying to enveigle him into a championship bout, and finally caught him Christmas Day, 1908. Burns absorbed an unmerciful drubbing and police halted the slaughter in the fourteenth round. Referee Hugh McIntosh, who had previously announced he would name the winner even though the bout might be stopped prematurely, promptly raised Johnson's hand in token of victory.

Guldahl Is Tops In Western Open

St. Louis, June 13 (U.P.).—A field of more than 100 of the Nation's best golfers will tee off tomorrow at the Westwood Country Club links for the thirty-eighth playing of the Western Open Championship Tournament.

The field will be paced by Ralph Guldahl, Braidburn, N. J., who successfully defended his National Open title at Denver, Colo., last week by beating out his nearest rival by six strokes; Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.; Paul Runyun, White Plains, N. Y.; Horton Smith, Harry Cooper and Tommy Armour, of Chicago, and others.

Patty Berg Wins Medal With a 79

Scores Two Over Par on Difficult Course in Western Open.

Colorado Springs, Colo., June 13.—Southwestern plain or upland mountain country—it's all the same to freckled Patty Berg, at 20 a veteran in women's golf competition.

Only two days after she won the Transmississippi title at Tulsa, the Minneapolis marvel today shot 41—38—79 against a high wind battering the peak-picketed Broadmoor links to lead other strong rivals in the 18-hole qualifying test for the Western Open title.

Patty's score was two over par, but weighed against the mountain winds and the exacting course, it was highly commendable.

Helen Hofman, Salt Lake City brunette who smacks them far off the tee, pushed Patty with 43—38—81, and might have won the medal with better puttting. She three-putted two greens and took four on the ninth carpet.

Champion Posts 82.

Defending champion Helen Hicks Harb, of Little Rock, Ark., who thoroughly approves of this tournament's ruling that the previous year's winner must qualify again, played with Miss Berg and came home with 39—43—82.

Smiling Helen was only one over par on the first nine, but said she "couldn't make my second shots behave" on the second nine.

The champion scarcely talked about her own round in praising Patty's play. "She really was shooting 70 golf out there today," Mrs. Harb declared. Her husband, Whitney Harb, was in the gallery.

Even an 8 on the 408-yard par 5 ninth hole—something almost as rare as a topper drive—couldn't upset red-haired Patty.

Caught in the deep grass near the green, she apparently didn't realize how close she was to the hole and her pitch hit the pin, bouncing 3 feet back. Officials used a measuring tape to determine that Patty was less than 60 feet away when she chipped the ball and levied a two-stroke penalty.

Patty Scores Birdie.

The little Minnesotan gritted her teeth and pounded two perfect shots on the uphill 386-yard tenth green for a birdie 4. On the 433-yard twelfth her second scooted across the green, but she almost sank the chip for an eagle 3.

Her putter wavered on the fourteenth and fifteenth and she took 3 on each green. Patty poled a beeline tee shot within a short distance of the lake on the 406-yard eighteenth and followed with a wood second to within 6 feet of the cup. But her putt for the eagle 3 slipped past and she took her fifth birdie of the day instead.

Chase, Ex-Terp, To Wed Saturday

Spencer Chase, former University of Maryland basketball star, will march down the aisle with Gertrude Donnella Saturday at 2:30 p. m. The ceremonies will take place at the Metropolitan Presbyterian Church.

Chase entered the university in 1930, and after watching the Terps of that season win the Southern Conference Basketball Championship, got himself a uniform and starred for three years for Coach Burt Shipley's aggregation. He also played baseball for the Old Liners, holding down the first-base job for two seasons.

O'Donnell's Defeated By National Savings

Tillie Scott, National Savings crack shortstop, smacked a home run with two mates aboard in the eighth inning, to hand O'Donnell's Grill nine its first defeat of the season. The score of the Industrial League tilt was 4-3.

Traded to Cincinnati

Here is Bucky Walters, right-handed hurler, who yesterday was traded to the Cincinnati Reds by the Philadelphia Phils for Pitcher Al Hollingsworth and Catcher Virg Davis, along with a bundle of cash. The exact amount was not disclosed, but it is believed to be "close to $50,000." Walters had been with the Phils since 1934, and is considered one of the leading pitchers in the National League.

Trade Talk Is Heard as Nats Start Swing Around League

Griffith Admits He Is Casting About for Material, Probably a Pitcher; Club Faces Indians.

By Shirley Povich.

Trade talk was rampant as the Nats entrained last night on their second tour tof the West, a journey that will carry them into every city of the league before they return to Griffith Stadium for a Fourth of July twin bill with the Yankees.

Owner Clark Griffith, in a frenzy to bolster his club, which is only 4½ games out of the lead despite their past disastrous week when they lost two out of three to the Browns and three straight to the Tigers, admitted yesterday that he had hopes of making a deal before the June 15 deadline.

"I am feeling around," said the Nats' owner, which is tantamount to an expression that a trade has virtually been completed. For Griffith habitually denies any deals are brewing until he springs a trade before the end of the trading limit.

Pitchers, at least one, is the objective of the Nats' owner, who feels his club has the hitting strength to make a serious bid for the pennant. And he is now willing to sacrifice players who formerly were regarded as unmentionables where trade talk was concerned.

Despite Griffith's denials, there is evidence that the Nats' owner is talking trade with the St. Louis Browns, who are ready to deal for Pitcher Oral Hildebrand for a price. The price is believed to be Johnny Stone or Al Simmons, or both.

Griffith would part with Simmons and even Stone if it would bring a pitcher to the Nats. Stone has not been hitting enough to suit Manager Bucky Harris and the Nats' bosses feel that they are amply protected in the outfield. Stone is no longer regarded as the sacred cow of the outfielding corps and Simmons' failure to hit consistently also makes him ripe for a trade.

May Trade Bonura.

In fact, the Nats might even part with Zeke Bonura if the proper pitcher were mentioned in a deal.

Manager Bucky Harris and his club entrained last night for Cleveland, where tomorrow they open a three-game series with the league-leading Indians. Chief Elon Hogsett, who was beaten by the Indians here, is expected to pitch the series opener for the Nats.

In Cleveland, the Washington club will be joined by Jimmy Wasdell, rookie first baseman who has been recalled from Indianapolis. Harris is definitely committed to the plan of starting Wasdell against right-handed pitching and benching Zeke Bonura until that fellow shows signs of arousing himself from his hitting slump.

Honor Wilson Athletes.

With Walter Johnson, former American eLague pitching ace, awarding letters and Tuffy Leemans and Charlie Malone, of football fame, present as guests, 32 athletes of the track, baseball, golf and swimming teams were honored by Woodrow Wilson High School yesterday.

Five Winners

Bill Benning's, The Washington Post handicapper, saw five of his selections win at Delaware Park yesterday. His daily double also clicked.

The winners were Romaunt in the first race, Sun Kincsen in the second, Could Be in the third, Chief Cherokee in the seventh and Galloping in the eighth.

Bennings also had three winners at Charles Town.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, June 13.—Two Washington, one Richmond and two Baltimore players were victorious in their second round matches completed today in the opening of the Maryland State Women's Tennis Tournament at the Baltimore Country Club.

The seeded entrants advanced in straight sets, although there were four three-set engagements.

Mrs. Stanley Robinson, 1937 winner and seeded first, won her preliminary round match from Ida Braverman, 6—0, 6—1, and her first round encounter from Liza Bloede, 6—2, 6—2. Mrs. Robinson is this year's Washington champion.

Edith Clarke, 1937 District of Columbia titleholder and ranked second, won from the Bryn Wawr School entry, Barbara Levering, 6—0, 6—1, in the first round and from Mrs. Warren Richards, 6—0, 6—1, in the second.

War Netmen Win.

In a Departmental League tennis match, the War Department team defeated Agriculture, 3-2, on the Potomac Park courts yesterday.

Deal Boosts CincyMound Staff to Four

Hollingworth and Davis Plus $50,000 Paid by Reds' Club.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 13.—Cincinnati's Reds acquired Pitcher Bucky Walters from Philadelphia today in return for Pitcher Al Hollingsworth, the veteran catcher, Virg Davis and a sizable sum of cash.

"I think it's a swell deal, and maybe we can go places now," commented the Reds' general manager, Warren C. Giles.

"We're very, very satisfied."

One sports writer said "close to $50,000" was believed involved in the deal, which appeared to offer prospect of relieving Manager Bill McKechnie of a major worry—how to win ball games with only three starting pitchers.

3 Have 17 Wins.

Rookie Johnny Vander Meer, who last Saturday hurled a no-hit, no-run game against Boston; Paul Derringer and big Jim Weaver have accounted for 17 of the Reds' 24 victories to date.

Of the remainder, Hollingsworth accounted for two, although he went the route in only one contest.

Up from Syracuse in 1934, where he helped hurl the International Leaguers to a pennant, the big portsider won 9 and lost 15 games in his record to 11 and 21, and last two.

Won 14 Last Year.

Walters, 28, has been with the Phils since 1934. In 1935 he won 9 and lost 9, in 1936 increased his record to 11 and 21, an dlast year won 14 and lost 15.

The release of Davis, who came to the Reds from the Cardinals in December, 1936, puts the burden of relief backstopping upon young Hershberger. Davis was with the Phils from 1928 until 1933.

He caught 79 games last year, batted .268 and helped develop Lefty Lee Grissom, sophomore hurler who has been out this season as a result of a tonsilectomy.

Yellow Baseball Will Make Debut InD.C.Tomorrow

When the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Pepco meet in a baseball game tomorrow afternoon at Griffith Stadium as a part of the Shriner's Day celebration, a yellow baseball will be used instead of the regular type. This will be the first time that a ball of its kind has ever been used by local teams.

Columbia and Penn University tried the ball on several occasions and found it to be very helpful. The big leagues experimented with the yellow and red seamed pellet, but their reaction is not definitely known.

The idea of a yellow ball was originated by a safety engineer, who pointed out the fact that yellow was used universally as safety markers, and on streets where it was meant for the public to observe laws of the community. For this reason, it is believed that the ball would be easier for the batter to see and the spectators to follow.

3 Navy Lacrosse Stars Are Named

New York, June 13 (U.P.).—Three Navy stars won places today on the official all-America Intercollegiate Lacrosse team for 1938, selected by the Intercollegiate Lacrosse Association. Army and Maryland each placed two men on the team.

The team:

Heflin Is Signed By Boston Team

Fredericksburg, Va., June 13.—Randolph Heflin, 18-year-old speedball pitcher, of this city, has signed a contract with the Boston Red Sox and today reported to Rocky Mount of the Piedmont League for farming.

Vidmer Welcomed to Post Sports Section

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

Copyright, 1938, by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, June 13.—When Ralph Guldahl won the National Open Golf Championship at Oakland Hills in Detroit a year ago, he acquired something more than the title, the fame and fortune that go with the game's great crown: he acquired the assurance and security which make championships and tournament victories come easier.

VIDMER.

Let's look at the gigantic Guldahl as he stood on the eighteenth tee at Oakland Hills a year ago, and compare the figure with the same Guldahl that started the last nine holes at Cherry Hills in Denver last Saturday.

At Oakland Hills, Guldahl was a nervous, tense, tight-lipped young man with a gleam of frantic desperation in his eyes. He was harassed and worried, conscious of the tremendous pressure that was on him: for more than merely the championship depended on how he played that last hole; it was a question of win and find peace, miss and continue to starve through at least another year.

And starvation had been trailing him and his little family for five years. As a youngster he had been the pro at a club outside of St. Louis. It wasn't a lucrative job, but at least it was a steady income that made ends meet and there always was the hope for the future. But when the depression reached bottom Ralph had to be dropped from the pay roll.

* * * *

The following years produced a series of nightmarish experiences for the gigantic golfter. He tried to continue playing, but couldn't even find the money to pay a caddy. He gave up the game and took a job as a carpenter in a Hollywood studio. He tried to sell automobiles. He found other employment, but own deep inside of him he felt that he could make a better living and eventually achieve success at golf—if he just had enough money to make a start. And his wife was just as confident of his ability.

She was the one who finally induced him to go back to his game. She was willing to make any sacrifice, live on nothing if necessary until he got his start. And so for a year he campaigned, here and there, traveling in day coaches, living in boarding houses, walking to the courses to save bus fare.

He picked up a little in prize money now and then, but it was only enough to tide him over until the next tournament and get him to the next stop on the competitive tour. He almost won the Masters, but was nosed out down the stretch by Byron Nelson. And only those who finish first find it worth while; no one ever remembers who finished second. and Guldahl was still struggling to get along from day to day; to keep going until he could win a major title and cash in on it.

* * * *

And it was in that frame of mind that he stood on the eighteenth tee in the last round at Detroit. Here was the biggest title in the world almost in his grasp. His whole life practically depended on this one hole. If he won, the future would prove smooth; if he blew the struggle might go on and on until finally he would have to go back to selling automobiles—or working as a carpenter.

He stood there for fully five minutes, waiting for the crowd to stop milling around, fretting at the whispers of excitement, the chatter of the people, the clicking of cameras. He stood there fidgeting as each small sound thundered against his jagged nerves, and three times he took off his glove to wipe his hand dry of the nervous sweat that drenched it. Harry Cooper, with whom he was paired, finally calmed him sufficiently with reassuring words so that he could drive, and when his third shot hit the green, he had three putts for victory. He needed only two.

And that was the Guldahl of a year ago; the Guldahl who was struggling for existence. He won the Open championship of 1937 by two strokes, but it was a much greater triumph than the title he took last Saturday by six. This year there wasn't that same strain. His fame and fortune were made, his future was assured. He already had won the Open. Of course, it would help to win it again, only three others ever had won the Open two years in succession, the last one to repeat being Bob Jones in 1929 and 1930. But there was no desperation in Guldahl's heart this time.

He could face the situation with a philosophical smile. Either you do or you don't mind and if you don't—well, there's always another year and dozens of other tournaments. This time it wasn't a case of now or never. And when the crowds milled about him and the guards tried to shove the people back, he simply smiled and waved his hand and said give 'em a chance to see the shots; that's what they had come out for. Their excitement didn't prove contagious as it had a year before. Their chattering didn't thud like hammers against his nerves.

He could laugh now and talk, for the tenseness had gone from his lips, the tightness from his throat, and his heart was beating regularly instead of thumping in syncopated rhythm.

* * * *

And so, with his feet on the ground, and no fear in his soul, he marched to victory over the last nine holes of the National Open and won going away, as they say at the track, picking up pars and birdies and coming home six strokes ahead of his nearest competitor, playing 72 holes in a total of 284 strokes, even par on a course that proved the toughest layout the open ever provided with the possible exception of Oakmont at Pittsburgh.

A year ago, or a little more than a year ago, Ralph Guldahl was just another golfer, an outsider, trailing along with the procession, struggling to make a living from the game and having little success at it. Today he stands out as the best competitor in the brigade. Over the span of a dozen tournaments Harry Cooper and Johnny Revolta might show a better average per round, Sam Snead might take more victories, Henry Picard might seem a better stylist and Jimmie Thomson outdrive him from every tee. But when the chips are down, Guldahl has proved that he can fight his way through, without cracking, without getting the jitters on the brink of success.

Maybe the hardships and the struggles of those early years, the bitterness of poverty and the determination it took to play on in spite of obstacles, gave him something a great golfer must have—courage.

George Gist Posts a 154 For Second

Mifflin Leads Class B Players With a Net Score of 132.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Frank M. Goodwin, jr., Congressional golf player, playing for the Treasury Department Recreation Association, scored 79-73 yesterday at Kenwood to pace the first day's field in the annual Federal Golf Associatoin tournament, with his gross score of 152. The low gross player will receive the J. Edgar Hoover Trophy. George Gist, Interior Department, was two strokes back with 81-73—154.

Bobby Burton, municipal star from the Navy Department, added an afternoon 76 to a first-round 79 to finish third among the class A players with 155, with Willard Turner, of Treasury, next with two 78s for 156 and three tied for the fifth low score of the day, Frank G. Butler, GAO, 78-79—157, and Col. J. Buchanan and Capt. Parks, of War, with like totals. F. R. Linn, of ICC, had the lowest class A net score with 159-30—129.

E. L. Mifflin, War Department, paced the low net scores among the class B players with a 132 total, from rounds of 80-78, and a combined 26 handicap. The class C players were led by Charles Barnard's 129 net, from 81-86—167, and a 38 handicap.

The remainder in the field of 180 players will complete the event today, with several of the entries favored to better Goodwin's 152 total, including Tommy Webb, Tommy Bones, Edgar Johnson, John R. Miller, Jock Olmsted, Jerry Hart and others.

The winners of the Andrew Mellon Team Trophy will not be known until todays' rounds have been completed, although Treasury, with Goodwin and Turner among the low scorers, War with Buchanan, Parks and Belshe, 159, and GAO with Butler and Sam Harvey, the latter with 160, are in the lead.

Goodwin ran a disastrous seven on the par 4 fourteenth hole of the first round to soar his score, but he rallied to finish in even par for the 79. The medalist played the front nine in the afternoon in 38 and returned in 33, with birdies on 10 and 16, for a 73.

Gist needed a four on the last hole for a par 71, a tie with Goodwin, and the lowest round of the day on his second trip, but finished with a six and 73. He played the front nine in 1 under par 34.

Isolater First At Aqueduct

5-Year-Old Goes to Class C Group.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 13.—William Woodward's Isolater finally found a field he could beat today.

After failing often against the country's leading runners, the 5-year-old son of Blandford was dropped down into Class "C" handicap at Aqueduct and came through with a photo finish decision. With Jimmy Stout in the saddle, the Woodward veteran registered by the narrowest of margins over the Paragon Stable's Indomitable after running the 6½ furlongs in the fast time of 1:17 3-5.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's Blind Eagle, which early in the season looked as if he would develop into top-notch stake caliber, cut loose in the stretch to whip four other 3-year-olds in the mile and 70 yards of the Dorchester Purse at Suffolk Downs.

Blind Eagle was the even-money favorite to score his third victory in 11 starts this year. He is eligible for Saturday's running of the $15,000 Yankee Handicap.

Longshot players collected in the sixth race at Delaware Park when H. L. Straus' Scout. About whipped a small field of 2-year-old claimers to pay $60.50 for $2. The son of The Scout had a rather poor record over fast tracks, but today he had heavy going under foot and raced greatly improved.

Millie M., consistent 4-year-old filly from the Lemar Stock Farm, turned in her second straight victory at Lincoln Fields, finishing the mile race a length and a quarter ahead of Mrs. Ethel Mars' favorite, Mars Shield. Millie M. took the lead on the first turn and beat off challenges by Mars Shield and Mrs. E. K. Weil's Bel Espoir. The filly ran the mile in 1:38 2-5 and paid $8.20 for $2.

Variety Club Loses.

The First Grill Colonials softball team defeated the Variety Club, 7-2, yesterday on the West Ellipse field. Jack Butterworth, former George Washington star athlete, was the winning pitcher.

Louis Picks Himself.

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 13 (U.P.).—Champion Joe Louis predicted today that he would knock out Max Schmeling in the first or second round of their title fight on June 22.

Sports Postscripts

It's probably just as well the Nats are on the road after that game they perpetrated with the aid of Detroit the other afternoon . . . More than a few fans in the stands that afternoon were ready to go out on the field . . . And they weren't seeking autographs! . . . Zeke Bonura, who has been the target of lemons lately, bore the brunt of a barrage of squirrel food which was released with the cry of "Nuts to the Nats" . . . Note to Clark Griffith: Have a look at Whitlow Wyatt, former Detroit pitcher, who is going great guns with Milwaukee in the American Association . . . Benny Mensh who helped you discover Pete Appleton alias Jablonowski has seen Wyatt in action and reports him better than some of your alleged hurlers . . .

Mace Brown, the Pirates' big righthander, chalked up his eighth victory in a relief role Sunday . . . S'funny thing the only game he started this season he lost . . . Shoeless Joe Jackson is running a chain of liquor stores in and about Greenville, S. C., and is reported to be doing well . . . Wonder if Bill Holland, the young lefthanded pitcher, the Nats signed the other day, is any relation to Bill Holland, former all-America football star at South Carolina? . . . Augie Galan's Cub teammates call him "Goo-goo"

Ozzie Simmons, star Negro back at Iowa several seasons ago, is an assistant playground director in Chicago while Jesse Owens is a bathhouse attendant in Cleveland . . . Sports writers assigned to the training camps of Joe Louis and Max Schmeling are so hard up for stories that a certain New York writer sent in account of an interview with Schmeling's right arm the other day . . . The story was headlined "Schmeling's best friend is confident" . . . Best crack of the week was made by Tom Meany who wrote in the World Telegram, "Jimmy Adamick's invisible knockout is being investigated on the suspicion that the hand is not much quicker than the eye!" . . . JACK MUNHALL.

Federal Golf Tourney Leader and Cup

Frank Goodwin (right) and Tom Belshe hold the newly donated J. Edgar Hoover Trophy for the medalist in the Federal Golf Association event at Kenwood. Goodwin led yesterday's play with 79-73—152, while Belshe is the man responsible for the new trophy as he retired the Grosner Cup after winning it three times. He had 80-79 yesterday.

Tourney Set At Columbia

Helen Dettweiler to Miss Annual Golf Meet.

The semifinal tourney on the Women's District Golf Association card, the Star Cup, is scheduled Wednesday and Thursday at Columbia with Marion Brown, newly crowned District champion, heading the entries. Helen Dettweiler, out of town on a business trip, will not compete. The tourney is 36-holes of medal play with handicaps. Mrs. Walter Stokes, Indian Spring, is defending champion.

Aha! New Clews! Sinus Is Seen As Dizzy's Hurt

Chicago, June 13 (AP).—Dizzy Dean, Chicago Cubs' pitcher who was left at home because of a sore arm when teammates headed East for a long road trip, will take treatments for a sinus infection within a few days, club officials said tonight.

After six weeks of rest Dean complained last week of recurring soreness in his high-priced salary flipper and physicians believe a sinus infection which bothered Dean last spring may be delaying his recovery. Dean will not be permitted to throw for at least a week and when he does start tossing a ball he will not be permitted to "bear down" for several days.

Come Home Wins In Detroit Feature

Detroit, June 13 (AP).—Come Home, owned by E. A. Lutz, chalked up her second straight victory over the Fair Grounds track here by capturing the sixth race, main attraction of today's charity program.

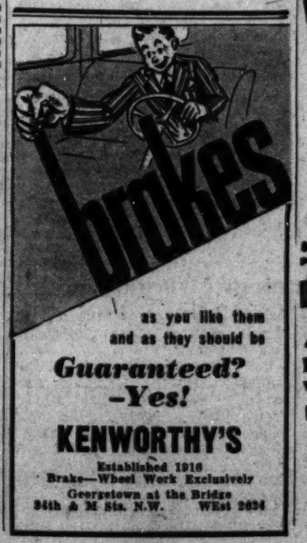
Come Home paid $8.20, $4 and $3 across the board for $2 tickets. Blakeen paid $4 and $2.80, while Leros, the show horse, returned $4.20. Time for the 6 furlongs was 1:14 3-5.

Sherwood League.

The softball team sponsored by New Deal Men's Shop has an excellent chance to win the first half championship in the Sherwood League. With a record of eight wins and two losses, and only one game to play, they are in undisputed possession of first place. They have maintained that position since since the beginning of the season due to the splendid team work and outstanding performance of their batteries, Juliana and Lamb as well as Grace, George and Potts both at bat and on the field.

Schmeling Is Busy.

Speculator, N. Y., June 13 (AP).—Max Schmeling took a 10-mile workout on the road today but did no boxing in preparation for his attempt to regain the heavyweight title from Joe Louis a week from Wednesday.



'Uncle Joe' Turner Will Teach Bobby Bruns Few Mat Lessons

Public Workout at Arena Today Is Something New in the Mat Game; Londos Is Bobby's Foe.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Evidently a bit irked by the poor quality of villainy being perpetrated on his property these days, Uncle Joe Turner shepherd of the pachyderms in this territory, will peel off his coat this afternoon at the arena and work out with Bobby Bruns. The public demonstration will get under way promtply at 2 o'clock, and you're invited.

Bruns, in case you haven't heard, goes to the mat Thursday night with that venerable old gentleman, Jim Londos, and gossip hath it that Turner is pulling for a Bruns victory. But Uncle Joe hasn't as much faith in the Chicagoan's ability as he'd like to have, and for that reason is going to show him a few of the old tricks to bolster his repertoire.

The funniest part of this is that Turner may put Bruns to shame, which wouldn't surprise any veteran wrestling fan who knew him during his salad days. Joe was only a middleweight, but barred no opponents and for that reason met—and threw—more than one heavyweight. Turner also had a little of the "Old Harry" in him and on more than one occasion threw the referee just for the L of it.

Seriously speaking, Joe konws a few things Bruns would do well to copy. He had only one arm hammer lock pinned on him, fofr example, during his entire career and can show Bobby how to wriggle out of one if Londos clamps it on him. Joe also has a few private holds, sort of hybrids, which aren't used extensively today, and which he feels will catch Londos off guard. At any rate, whatever he has to whisper in Bruns' ear will be worth hearing.

Londos, according to well-founded publicity handouts, wants to work here as often as possible this summer and against top-notch opponents. He's down to his last million and hankers to bolster the wilting bankroll with a few sizable purses. Turner, however has an idea it's Bruns the patrons are shelling out to see, and, if he's right in this deduction, he knows it would be poor business on his part to import Mr. Londos to bump him off. But that's what Joe's afraid will happen, and that's why he's doing everything in his power to prevent it.

Day Gets Ultimatum.

Chicago, June 13 (U.P.).—The Illinois Athletic Commission today ordered Lightweight Contender Davey Day, of Chicago, to fulfill a contract to fight Nick Camaratta within three weeks or show cause why he should not be suspended.

Seattle, June 13 (AP).—Three University of Washington crews, admittedly facing their toughest Poughkeepsie assignment in history, loaded equipment to leave tonight for the Intercollegiate Rowing Regatta on the Hudson June 27.

2,000 Fans Cheer As Mickey Takes Place Behind Bat

Charleston, W. Va., June 13 (AP). Two thousand appreciative fans cheered Mickey Cochrane today as he took his old spot behind home plate, but the Detroit Tigers' manager quickly let it be known he had no intention of working in a league game.

Mickey played first base in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings of the Tigers' game against the Tigers' farm hands, the Charleston Senators of the Middle Atlantic League.

In the ninth he donned his once-familiar catcher's regalia for the first time in a regulation game since his skull was fractured by a ball thrown by Bump Hadley at Yankee Stadium May 25, 1937.

"It was just for the exercise," Cochrane grinned after the game, which the Tigers won easily, 7 to 1.

Diven Is Re-elected.

Philadelphia, June 13 (AP).—Charles W. Diven, jr., of Sharon, today became the first University of Pennsylvania basketball captain in many years to be re-elected. He will be a senior next year.

Hard Chase, a $30.60 Shot, Wins Feature Race at Charles Town

Early Lead Gives Victor Nose Victory

Tuleyries Lad Beaten Out; Halloo Wins Show Money.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 13.—Mrs. J. H. Elliott's Hard Chase, with only $85 in purse money to show for seven trips to the races this year, ankled to the post today in the Purcellville Purse, the feature race, and jolted the talent by winning at a $30.60 mutuel. With Jockey D. Scocca, a boy who had not ridden a winner at the meeting, in the saddle, Hard Chase circled the course and then held on to triumph by a scant nose from Mrs. E. L. Bull's Tuleyries Lad. Two and a half lengths farther back came Halloo to be third in the field of seven.

Hard Chase, a 6-year-old daughter of Purchase, took command in the opening furlong and then shook off or withstood every challenge. Tuleyries Lad, off poorly, came to the leaders boldly and had the powerful Lou Machado in the saddle. But the leading rider at the meeting failed to cope with little Scocca and his mare. Hard Chase stuck to her guns long enough to bring joy to her scattered backers.

The winner stepped the seven furlongs over a good track in 1:29 3-5.

Cold Charity, owned by J. E. Hughes proved a "hot thing" in the first race, the St. James filly forging to the front early and drawing out to win by five lengths over Home Hunter. Third money in the field of seven juveniles went to the favorite, Miss Green. The winner paid $7.60.

Justa Canter, with Gene Terhune doing the booting, took the second race, lasting ahead of a bold stretch rush by Every Effort. Depinard was third after setting most of the pace. Justa Canter rewarded the faithful with a $9.40 pay-off. Jockey Garrett was tossed off Wander Bird but escaped injury.

Garrett, after riding back from the second race in the track ambulance, climbed aboard Miss Symphony, a $19 shot, and brought her home a neck ahead of Topsie H. Proven gathered the show money. Garrett took back off Topsie H's pace and then came on in the stretch to win going away.

Spotless came from behind to down Aella by a head in the fifth race while under the urging of Apprentice Beverly Hacker. Aella and Newgro set the pace far out in front while Hacker held Spotless back. Approaching the stretch, he turned the filly loose and she was up in the concluding strides.

†Pulled up.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLD CHARITY, $7.60, $5.20, $3.20; HOME HUNTER, $13.60, $5.60; MISS GREEN, $3.00.

COLD CHARITY sprinted to the front at once, opened a good lead and was not threatened while winning easily. HOME HUNTER was hard ridden and showed a good effort. MISS GREEN went evenly, but was held safe. KILLY went forwardly to the stretch and weakened. IVY X. could not reach contention. KENTY'S LAD failed to show speed at any stage. WHITTLE PETE bucked his shins and was pulled up.

SECOND RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:06. Off at 3:08. Winner, Mrs. H. R. Jenkins' ch. g. (5), by Canter—Just Believe. Trained by H. R. Jenkins. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:52 3-5.

†Lost rider.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA CANTER, $9.40, $4.40, $2.40; EVERY EFFORT, $4.00, $2.60; DEPINARD, $3.00.

JUSTA CANTER came around DEPINARD to get to the front and was kept to a stout drive to stave off the closing rush of EVERY EFFORT. The latter was away sluggishly, moved to contention with good speed, came wide entering the stretch and probably was best. DEPINARD had speed to go to the front soon after the break, but weakened after being collared by the winner. TAKE OFF tired in the closing stages. WANDEBIRD lost her rider when she stumbled nearing the stretch.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:33. Off at 3:35½. Winner, H. Suff's b. m. (6), by The Wanderer—Golden Bantam. Trained by J. Taylor. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:21 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS SYMPHONY, $19.00, $8.40, $3.80; TOPSIE H., $16.00, $9.80; PROVEN, $2.80.

MISS SYMPHONY, off forwardly, was taken under steadying restraint while racing with TOPSIE H., came to the outside entering the stretch, took command and held away to the end. TOPSIE H. was in motion at the break, was hard ridden while setting the pace, but closed courageously. RUNNING WATER and TRIP were blocked entering the stretch.

Daily Double, Justa Canter and Miss Symphony, Paid $72.60.

FOURTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:04. Off at 4:05. Winner, Mrs. G. H. Pearce's ch. f. (3), by Calf Roper—Uome. Trained by G. H. Pearce. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:53.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE PRELUDE, $4.20, $3.20, $3.20; PHILIGAL, $4.40, $4.00; MARY ALLEN, $8.60.

BLUE PRELUDE went up on the inside to take command nearing the turn, was taken out in the better going and closed under a stout urging. PHILIGAL raced on the outside and closed with a rush. MARY ALLEN closed gamely to make up ground from a slow beginning. CATS CRADLE was timidly handled.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:31. Winner, Mrs. U. Webb's ch. f. (4), by Ed Crump—Sunup. Trained by S. B. Webb. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:22 3-5.

GREAT LOSS	(Taylor)	116	6	2	4ʰ	5½	8	8	42.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPOTLESS, $8.80, $4.20, $2.80; AELLA, $3.20, $2.40; NEWGRO, $2.60.

SPOTLESS, allowed to settle into stride, circled horses to reach contention leaving the backstretch and, under intermittent pumishment, disposed of AELLA in the final 70 yards. AELLA was hard ridden while setting the pace, accompanied by NEWGRO, and weakened in the closing test. NEWGRO was used up forcing the pace and tired. CROSSING OVER was a forward factor throughout.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $300. The Purcellville; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:37. Winner, J. H. Elliott's br. m. (6), by Purchase—Hardy Fern. Trained by H. B. Rutter. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $30; fourth, $25. Time, 1:29 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HARD CHASE, $30.60, $12.80, $6.20; TULEYRIES LAD, $4.40, $2.80; HALLOO, $3.00.

HARD CHASE went to the front under hustling tactics going to the first turn, shook off QUICK VINE to open a good lead and held on to barely hold TULEYRIES LAD safe. The latter was away poorly, went to the leaders with a rush along the backstretch and fought it out willingly. HALLOO, trailing to the backstretch, went to contention readily, but faltered in the final sixteenth. GOODY GOODY showed a good effort.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500. The Town Hall; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:25. Off at 5:25½. Winner, R. B. Jackson's b. m. (8), by Runantell—Orageuse. Trained by J. Hill. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:51 1-5.

CANIMAR	(Berg)*	116	4	6	6	6	6	6	6	3.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISCHIEFMAKER, $7.80, $5.80, $3.80; TULEYRIES STAR, $7.20, $4.20; LITTLE PERCY, $3.60.

MISCHIEFMAKER, rated off the pace until leaving the backstretch, came wide turning for home and won under snug hand ride. TULEYRIES STAR, used up forcing the pace, was no match for the winner. LITTLE PERCY, in hand while following the pace, ran into a pocket turning for home and, but for this, might have been the winner. DIXIE BEE, on the outside for three-quarters, moved inside leaving the backstretch, was blocked and dropped out of it, but came again in the final eighth. BROOKE HEROD showed speed for seven-eighths and then quit. CANIMAR showed nothing.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:51½. Off at 5:52. Winner, Mrs. H. W. Wageley's ch. m. (8), by Canter—Racket. Trained by C. Lee. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:51.

EASTER HERALD	(Machado)*	116	5	5	3¹	2¹	7¹	8	8	3.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANTERET, $19.20, $8.40, $5.40; REVONAH, $4.40, $3.40; PUKKA HEAVEN, $5.60.

CANTERET, sent to the front soon after the start, was nicely rated thereafter, came wide turning for home and then tired. PUKKA HEAVEN, hard handled from the break and kept on the outside throughout, closed willingly in the home stretch. MAD DASH, used up forcing the early pace, quit after leaving the backstretch. LAKAR, allowed to drop out of it early, came fast at the end. DUN LUCKY, a trailer in the early stages, failed to rally under punishment. GOLD STREAK had early speed. EASTER HERALD appeared overmatched.

With Bill Ackerman.

Capt. Taft Tippet is reporting excellent catches of sea trout right along, many as large of 5 pounds, caught on the edge of the steamboat channel in the bay off St. Jerome's Creek. Like at almost every other fishing point, the catches of hardheads are just what you care to take. He also notes the taking of some 60-odd blues last week in one of the nets.

ACKERMAN.

Down on the western shore of Virginia, Capt. T. S. Clopton has been catching sea trout up to 7 pounds, while at Messick, Capt. Floyd Rollins reports the first of the blues, and more important, the first cabio. It weighed 50 pounds. There are more signs of this great fighting fish than there has been for several years. The blues numbered 20, weighed from 2 to 12 pounds, but took two days to catch.

Capt. Wayland Baum at Wanchese notes large schools of rock in the sounds, as well as small blues and a few channel bass off the beach. Their season down there has been so cockeyed this year it doesn't seem out of the way at all to hear of catches during a month when fishing is unusually slow as a rule.

A note from George Lancaster at Rock Point with the information that he had built last winter a 40-foot Hooper Islander for use of guests at the hotel and that hardhead fishing is good.

The Lornigan bill has finally been brought out on the floor, due to the support of Senator Copeland, chairman of the committee, and will in all probability go to a vote this week. The enactment clause was emasculated, however, so the bill will not be all that sportsmen and conservationists had hoped for.

The fact that the Federal Government is recognizing its responsibility to prevent and correct pollution in the rivers and streams of the country is a real step forward, and the enactment clause will possibly come next year.

This bill is the culmination of a fight of almost 15 years by individuals and organizations all over the country.

The North-South skeet shoot last week was so outstanding many of the highlights were missed by the uninitiated. On the second day the spectator audience was the greatest to ever witness a shoot anywhere in the United States.

At the start of the .410 event, five men in the entire skeet world were credited with equaling the record of 96 and all were shooting in this event. George Deyoe entered this select field for something like 30 minutes, only to be beaten by Webster Lied with a new world's record of 97, as he settled upon his shoulders the mantle that had graced those of six.

In the two-man team event in the 20 gauge, the 197 of Ramsdell and Frank equaled the world's record, while on Sunday in the all-bore, George Deyoe's perfect 100 gave him not only the North-South championship, but a new record for three guns. His 293 was a 96 in the .410, 97 in the 20 gauge, and the 100 in the all-bore.

In the 20 gauge, the five men composing the team of the National Capital Rebels shot a 125 on one field for another record.

Hallie Walters had gone 87 straight to the easy No. 7 station on the fourth field before he muffed his big chance. He did the same thing in the all-bore the following day; the mental hazard was probably just a little too much.

In the all-bore, seven shooters were tied for second place with 99's. The first four rounds of the shoot off found Frank Kelly and Charles Gillett holding the field with perfect 100's, just what it had taken to beat them. In the fifth round, even again with 24's, and in the sixth the redoubtable Frank Kelly took the runner-up position, 24 to 22.

We think everyone will agree —seven world's records equaled or beaten in one shoot is something to talk about.

Utility Rates Are Based Upon Costs, Surplus

C. & P. Tel. Co. Vice President Addresses Chartered Life Underwriters.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Explaining that insurance companies are interested in the integrity of the investment of their reserves, Ralph A. Van Orsdel, vice president and general counsel of the Chesapeake & Potomac Teephone Co., reminded local Chartered Life Underwriters last night, that integrity of investment depends upon the value of the property which secures such investment.

Speaking at a dinner meeting of Washington chapter of the organization at the Cosmos Club, Mr. Van Orsdel said that fair value of utility property should represent the value of the property dedicated to public service at the time of the determination. Rates are based on this value, he explained, so that they will produce sufficient income to take care of the expenses, including depreciation, interest and taxes, and leave something for surplus, in order that the utility may have funds to discharge its public understakings.

Many regulatory authorities are of the opinion that the actual dollars invested in the property are the best evidence of what constitutes fair value, he advised. Dwight Scott, president of the chapter, presided at the meeting.

D. C. Life Underwriters.

The managers and general agents division of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association is holding its regular bi-monthly luncheon meeting at the Hamilton Hotel today. The guest and speaker on this occasion will be Troy M. Rodlun, who will talk to the group about various phases of advertising as it may affect life insurance distribution.

Mr. Rodlun has a wide background of experience in his field and was until recently advertising manager of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. He has also written many articles on advertising for such well known publications as Printers Ink and Advertising and Selling.

In an advertising connection he has represented the Servel Co., Inc., Frigidaire and General Electric Co., and has also been consultant for many other outstanding firms. At the present time, Mr. Rodlun is engaged as a personal consultant for circulation and sales promotion problems for individual clients.

At the last meeting of the managers' section, Charles W. O'Donnell, manager of the Minnesota Mutual Life Insurance Co., was elected president for the coming year succeeding H. Lawrence Choate. Armand Durant is now secretary, succeeding Roger Baldwin.

Cotton Lower; July 8.06 Cents

New York, June 13 (AP).—Improved weather conditions in the South brought in selling to cotton today. October eased from 8.19 to 8.04 and closed at 8.08, with final prices 8 to 11 points net lower.

The market opened 1 point higher to 3 points lower, but with demand limited, prices soon eased under liquidation and scattered selling. Initial declines uncovered some trade buying at limits, but when the weather reports showed better conditions, more selling appeared.

Retail Advertising 14.3% Under Year Ago

Chicago, June 13.—For the week ended June 4, retail display advertising volume was 14.3 per cent below the corresponding week of last year, according to a report today by Advertising Age.

The report which tabulates retail display in 80 major markets, shows a total of 17,572,130 lines for the week reported, a loss of 2,923,671 lines from the 20,496,801-line total for the corresponding 1937 week.

5 New Haven Plans Turned Down by ICC

Examiner Says Conditions of Railroad's Revenues Are Chaotic.

By the Associated Press.

An examiner for the Interstate Commerce Commission refused yesterday to approve any of five proposed plans for reorganization of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co. The examiner, Harvey H. Wilkinson, said:

"The present chaotic condition of the principal debtor's revenues are such that it is impossible at this time to estimate reasonably the future level of its earnings, and without which it is impracticable to formulate a plan of reorganization which would be fair to all parties concerned."

The railroad filed a petition in Federal court on October 23, 1935, stating it was unable to meet its debts as they matured and asking reorganization under section 77B of the bankruptcy act. The court approved the petition, allowed the road to operate its properties pending reorganization. Under commission rules, interested parties will have 20 days in which to file objections to Wilkinson's report, after which a date will be set for argument.

The New Haven line was organized in 1872, and owned 3,244 miles of tracks in Connecticut, Rhode Island, southern Massachusetts and southeastern New York.

Tables included in the examiner's report showed that passengers declined from a peak total of 107,505,000 in 1920 to a low of 29,029,000 in 1933. In 1936 the total was 34,551,000. Passenger revenues in 1936 were $24,996,101, as compared with $52,590,628 in 1920. Freight revenues dropped from $75,002,396 in 1927 to $44,880,649 in 1936.

Bank Deposits Jump in Week

By the Associated Press.

Bank deposits increased last week by one of the largest amounts in many months. The Federal Reserve board said yesterday that banks in 101 leading cities reported their demand deposits increased $445,000,000 to a total of $15,034,000,000. The increase was due to an almost equivalent increase in the loans and investments of banks.

Loans to securities brokers and dealers who needed the money for customary trading activity in connection with the June 15 Treasury refunding operations increased $270,000,000 and the banks also increased their own securities portfolios. The brokers' loan item, however, is expected to decline in the next week when the refunding is completed.

For the eighteenth consecutive week, commercial, industrial and agricultural loans declined. Banks in 101 cities reduced their business loans $30,000'000 to $3,981,000,000.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury June 10: Receipts, $27,824,440.93; expenditures, $19,677,385.07; working balance, $1,846,163,633.15. Customs receipts for the month, $7,076,182.88.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $5,610,905,579.49; expenditures, $7,162,339,233.42 (including $2,022,306,726.29 of emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures, $1,551,433,653.93. Gross debt, $37,378,327,135.98, an increase of $753,671,52 above the previous day. Gold assets, $12,943,839,302.74.

Industrial Stocks Give Way To Moderate Selling Pressure

By Victor Eubank,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, June 13.—Industrial stocks wilted under light selling showers in today's market. With the ticker tape loafing during the greater part of the proceedings, leading issues slipped fractions to 2 points and a few dropped 3 or so.

Transfers amounted to 326,890 shares compared with 406,370 last Friday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .9 of a point at 38.2.

Decision of administrative chieftains not to push rail relief legislation at this session of Congress was hardly surprising to financial quarters and rail shares really made a better showing than other groups. Carriers bonds, though, were under pressure.

The boardrooms found a grain of comfort in predictions Congress might adjourn by Wednesday night. Expectations the thoroughly worked over wage-hour bill would be passed were not too depressing to market sentiment.

Speculative forces, on the whole, derived mild consolation from the fact that important stock holdings refuse to come out on the downside and that for several weeks activity has been briskest when prices tilt upward.

Steels ignored official estimates of an upturn of .9 of a point in this week's mill operations. The magazine Steel, at the same time, saw few definite signs of a pickup in buying demand for the metal.

Sloan's Remarks.

General Motors preferred was an exception to the declining trend, showing a gain of 1½ points at 118⅜, but the common was off 1 at 28 and Chrysler yielded 1½ at 40. The somewhat pessimistic remarks of Chairman Sloan of General Motors regarding the outlook for this industry were seen a chilling influence for the market generally.

Aircrafts, coppers, oils, farm implements, mail orders and specialties were without much support at any time. Gold mining issues were fairly resistant and utilities were only fractionally in arrears.

Prominent share losers included U. S. Steel at 41, Bethlehem, 42¾; Douglas Aircraft, 42¼; Boeing, 22⅜; Anaconda, 23⅛; Kennecott, 27¾; Standard Oil of N. J., 45½; International Harvester, 50¼; Sears Roebuck, 54⅛; Westinghouse, 72⅞; Allied Chemical, 143½; Union Carbide, 62¾, and General Electric 32⅝.

Both sterling and the French franc lost their buoyancy in terms of the dollar which had given these currencies a sharp lift last week on rumors of dollar-pound devaluation. While some in Wall Street were none too sure the gold price might not be hiked, doubters of this move were plentiful.

Restraining the speculative urge for stocks also was a setback in major commodities. Wheat at Chicago was off 1 to 2⅛ cents a bushel and corn down 1¼ to 1½. Cotton fell 40 to 55 cents a bale.

Rail Bonds Depressed.

Although trading was desultory, scattered offerings, especially in medium and lower grade rails, were enough to depress the bond market today.

Utilities and the low-yield group held steady, but the Associated Press average of 20 rail bonds fell to the lowest since June 1, 1932. Industrials and foreign dollar liens were down slightly.

United States Governments were uneven, with longer maturity treasuries lower and shorter term obligations gaining as a sequel to last week's financing operation.

Stock Market Guaranty Fund Plan Perfected

Aim to Protect Customers if Exchange's Member Firm Fails.

The New York Stock Exchange has perfected its plan under which a "guaranty" fund ranging between $5,000,000 and $7,500,000 will be set up to protect customers if one of its member firms fails, it was learned yesterday. Brokerage house customers would thus be assured 100 cents on the dollar when a stock exchange firm fails.

Under the plan the stock exchange first will provide the funds to set up the "guaranty" fund. Eventually member firms will raise the money to reimburse the stock exchange for its investment. It is planned that a small surcharge will be paid by the brokers to raise the money.

For example, a member firm might contribute between one and two cents per hundred shares on the trading volume it executes. The brokers themselves would pay the surcharge and not the customer. The money will be deducted from the commissions which brokerage firms earn.

Details of the so-called "guaranty" or insurance plan were forwarded to the Securities and Exchange Commission, which is now studying them.

The "guaranty" feature is somewhat in line with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation which insures the deposits of customers with banks. The F. D. I. C. limits the insurance of $5,000 of deposits for each bank customer. Under the stock exchange "guaranty" plan protection would be afforded to the public and not to institutions or large professional traders.

The "guaranty" plan and the stock exchange trust company idea both are being studied by the exchange. The latter was suggested by William O. Douglas, chairman of the S. E. C., in an address before the Association of Stock Exchange firms on May 20. Douglas said such an institution would take over the functions of "banking, clearing of securities and the custodial duties of all members of the exchange." The trust company would act solely in a fiduciary relationship as agent for both brokers and customers.

Alternative Considered.

The "guaranty" plan, although being given serious study by the stock exchange, will be adopted in the event that the trust company suggestion of Douglas is discarded. Some members of the exchange feel that it should be set up regardless of whether the trust company is organized or not.

Failures of stock exchange firms have not been large in number, but proponents of the "guaranty" plan believe that customer repercussions have been highly unfavorable, owing to absence of protection. The collapse of Richard Whitney & Co. has brought the plan nearer to adoption.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press

London, June 13.—The stock market maintained a steady pace in quiet trading today. Aircrafts were stimulated by government plane orders, but other industrials showed only minor changes. Transatlantics edged forward. Gold shares held about steady, while coppers slipped back. British funds lost as much as £¼. Austrian loans were marked up moderately.

Paris—International issues stood out for modest gains in irregular fluctuations in the bourse today. Rentes finished 20 centimes higher to 40 lower. Suez Canal lost 170 francs, while Royal Dutch added 25.

Liverpool—Cotton moved 1d to 3d higher today to catch up with the week-end gain in New York. Demand was not aggressive, however, owing to poor cotton trade reports. Wheat futures closed steady and ¾d to 1½d higher following the sharp North American advance Saturday. American selling of December and better United States harvest weather reduced earlier gains.

School Pupils See Teacher Fall Dead

Mrs. Irene K. Holmes, 61, a teacher at Takoma School for more than 20 years, fell dead of a heart ailment on the school playground yesterday afternoon. As dozens of pupils looked on, she was carried into the principal's office, where she was pronounced dead by Dr. William Arthur Shannon.

Mrs. Holmes, who taught the second grade, is survived by two sons, Thomas Holmes, of Silver Spring, and Donald Holmes, of Shepherd Park. She made her home at 120 Maple avenue, Takoma Park.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, June 8, 1938. Public hearings having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing streets, roads and alleys, considered in connection with the dedication of certain areas for highway purposes, all as hereinafter described, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closings and dedications, and that the same are in the public interests and not detrimental to the interests of abutting property owners, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered: That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street, road and alley area in the District of Columbia, as shown in green on plats filed in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, and numbered as Maps 2040, 2082 and 2084, is hereby ordered CLOSED, same to take effect on and after JULY 8, 1938, the title to the land comprised in said area so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps, the street, road and alley area hereby ordered closed being described as follows: 1. Closing of Trumbull Circle and part of Taylor Street west of Trumbull Circle, Northwest, and in connection therewith a dedication of streets west of 17th Street, north of Piney Branch Parkway, and east of Rock Creek Park; and also the closing of parts of old roads, all in the above described territory. 2. Closing part of 36th Street between Whitehaven Parkway and T Street, Northwest. 3. Closing part of Brookland Avenue, N.E., between Michigan Avenue and Bates Road, closing Bates Road, N.E., from Porto Rico Avenue (proposed) to 8th Street (proposed), and closing part of an alley in Square 3821; and providing also for a dedication of land for highway purposes in this section, including the extension and widening of Taylor Street from its present western terminus at 7th Street, N.E., westerly to the westerly boundary of Parcel 135/4, and for the extension of a proposed street northwesterly from Taylor Street, N.E., to the westerly boundary of Parcel 123/25, and for other street area to be acquired by dedication in this section." Any and all parties interested must file objections, if any, to said closings in writing before the effective date of above order; otherwise said order shall become effective on July 8, 1938, as a Life's Darkest Moment.

Bob Burns Says—

There are not very many thrills that can equal that of going back to your home town and seein' your folks after you've been away for a long time, but there's a whole lot of disillusionment connected with it, too.

I've got one aunt that I always looked on as beln' very devout. I thought she was jest about the most wonderful woman in the world because as long as I can remember she would always get up in the mornin' and sing a hymn while she worked in the kitchen.

When I reminded her of it on a recent trip I made back home, she said, "Yes, I still sing that hymn in the mornin'—that's the hymn I boil eggs by—three verses for soft and five for hard."

Sulfanilamide Is Found Cure For Pneumonia

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, June 13.—Human bone marrow, which grows in bottles in a medical laboratory at the University of Oregon, has been catching pneumonia.

The pneumonia was caused by infecting the living marrow with human pneumococcus germs, and out of this strange experiment, the American Medical Association was informed today, has come a new idea about the treatment that promises to cut the pneumonia death rate.

The bottled marrow experiments were shown in the scientific exhibits by Edwin E. Osgood, M. D., of the University of Oregon Medical School, at Portland. He invented the method of growing human bone marrow artificially. He uses a new and simplified type of the "tissue culture" for which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh invented the artificial heart used at the Rockefeller Institute in New York.

Artificial Guinea Pigs.

Dr. Osgood takes marrow from the breast bone of living persons with a needle. It is as simple and comparatively painless as taking a drop of blood. This bit of bone marrow he puts in a small bottle with salts, serum and air on which the marrow calls can live.

Inasmuch as bone marrow forms human blood cells, it is an ideal "guinea pig." It catches pneumonia when pneumococcus germs are introduced and reacts to the disease apparently the same as the tissues of a human victim.

With these artifical guinea pigs Dr. Osgood has been testing the effects of sulfanilamide. This is the new drug, made from a red dye, which has astonished the medical profession in the last three years by its cures of blood poisoning and its beneficial effects on many types of germ infections.

All Germs Killed.

His exhibit cited a striking example in type 1 pneumonia in the marrow bottles. Some of the marrow was given type 1 antipneumococcus serum in the same dosage that would be used on a human being. At the end of 43 hours this bone marrow had 35,000 colonies of pneumonia germs. This was a tremendous reduction from the number of germs in bone marrow receiving no serum for its pneumonia.

But when sulfanilamide was added to the serum not a single germ colony could be found after 43 hours.

"If these results are applicable to human infections," Dr. Osgood said, "sulfanilamide added to the present dose of serum should further lower mortality."

June Audrey Kuhn, of Chicago, whose engagement to Bob Crosby, orchestra leader and brother of Bing Crosby, has been announced. Miss Kuhn said the wedding would be in the fall.

O'Connell Called As a Witness for His Enemy Hague

Newark, N. J., June 13 (AP).—Representative Jerry O'Connell, Montana Democrat, and foe of Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, was summoned today to appear as a witness for Hague in the Federal court injunction suit brought against him by the C. I. O. and American Civil Liberties Union.

A subpena also was issued for Representative John T. Bernard (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota. No definite date was set for their appearance, and in Washington the two Congressmen said they had not decided whether to honor the subpenas.

Hague, who was on the stand Friday, will testify again tomorrow.

State Attorney Ill, Cash Case Delayed

Miami, Fla., June 13 (AP).—Illness of State Attorney George A. Worley caused the grand jury to defer consideration of the James B. Cash, jr., kidnaping case today.

Clyde Tolson, a special guard posted outside Franklin P. McCall's cell, reported the 21-year-old truck driver refused breakfast, the first meal he had missed since he was taken into custody. McCall ate lunch, Tolson said, but appeared worried.

The Rev. C. A. McCall, an uncle, of Jasper, Fla., visited him briefly. The minister said they discussed spiritual matters.

Gillette to Attend Picnic.

Senator Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa, president of the Iowa State Society of Washington, will be one of many natives of the State at an old-fashioned picnic Saturday in Rock Creek Park.

Jackson Urges 'Middle Road' On Graduates

Solicitor General Favors Jefferson's Precept at Randolph-Macon.

By the Associated Press.

Ashland, Va., June 13.—Robert H. Jackson, United States Solicitor General, recommended Jefferson's "middle-of-the-road" attitude toward government in an address to the Randolph-Macon College graduating class today.

"Today, as in Jefferson's time," he warned, however, "the holder of liberal but moderate views must defend himself from extremists, both left and right."

"A government, to perform even a minimum of service to its people, must take steps to suppress avarice, to strike down privately built up schemes of economic exploitation or oppression, to uproot privilege and to assure social justice and economic opportunity to the masses," he continued.

Says His Generation Failed.

He stated his generation had failed to deal adequately with many problems because of constitutional interpretation, but added, "that in the last two years many of these disabilities have been removed by Supreme Court decisions. . . ."

Discussing the division of opinion when need comes for repairing the governmental structure, Jackson declared, "there will be one group of extremists who will say the house isn't worth fixing, it better be burned, or at least torn down to the foundations.

Rails at "Confidence" Plea.

"Then there will be an equally extreme group who insist that not even the leaky roof should be repaired. When it isn't raining, they will say, 'you can't do it economically in such bad weather' and that the only thing needed is more 'confidence' in the old roof and less 'attitude of hostility' to it.

"And between, like Jefferson, stand the great majority of the American people saying, 'we will bear with moderate imperfections, but we are capable of ordering our own affairs in our own time.'"

Communists to Protest Police Tactics Thursday

The District branch of the Communist Party will hold an open-air meeting at Tenth and U streets northwest at 7:30 p. m. today to protest "police brutality" in Washington. Speakers will be Edward Edison, Martin Chancey, Florence Plotnick and Tansel Butler.

Senate Approves U. S. Lease of Range Land

The Senate approved yesterday a House measure authorizing the Secretary of Interior to lease State, county or privately owned range lands lying within Federal grazing districts.

The measure, Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, said, would permit orderly land use and aid in conserving forage resources.

WPA Asked to Destroy Big Marihuana Field

Discovery of 85 acres of marihuana growing in the vicinity of Camden, N. J., caused city officials to appeal to Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, yesterday to urge the WPA immediately to assign men to destroy it.

City authorities said they wanted the weed destroyed before it could be used by narcotic peddlers.
